BANDIT CHIEFS IN QUARREL; CAPTIVES PLIGHT DARKER!

1922 REPORTS OF INSURANCE CONCERNS ARE SATISFACTORY

Cninese Companies Do Not Figure Very Strongly

TOO IMPATIENT

Hongkong Fire And Canton Pay Dividend Of 60 Per cent

BY DAVID ARAKIE

The statements of 1922 operations for practically all the local insurance companies are now published, and in the main are very satisfactory. Though there are many Chinese fire and marine companies in China, none of them has ever made much progress. This has probably been due to poor investments and too large dividends. Reserves are the essence of insurance, but quick profits are what the Chinese investor looks for.

A few of the Chinese companies worry along getting a certain amount of small business at rates slightly lower than those charged by foreign companies, but they will never provide any real competition for the large foreign companies until they learn to husband the profits of good years to insure for the losses of lean years.

During 1922 Chinese insurance companies in Shanghai did fairly well because the discounts on Chinese business were firmly regulated among foreign companies, and the Chinese concerns could "cut" safely and effectively. This year, however, the outlook is not promising as there are no longer any discount regulations among the foreign institutions and they are free to meet Chinese competition on good business.

At the same rates, the reputable foreign companies usually get the business because of the larger number of failures which have occurred among the Chinese companies and their present inability to produce any well-authenticated statement of sound condition and adequate reserves.

IN STRONG POSITION

Turning to the operations of the foreign insurance companies established in Shanghai and Hongkong, it is noticed that the Hongkong Fire and the Canton Insurance offices, whose agents are Messrs. Jardine, Matheson and Co., closed the year with working account balances of $631,693 and $2,352,375 respectively. Both of these organisations are in a very strong position as to reserves and reinsurance funds. So the decision of the Directors to pay a dividend of 60 percent on the paid-up shares of the Hongkong Fire and 40 per cent on the Canton Insurance shares is open to no criticism. Substantial additions to reserves were also made in the case of both companies and a comfortable margin carried over in the underwriting suspense account. These two concerns have long been good dividend-payers as they are favored with much of the best business in China through the strong position of the General Managers, Messrs. Jardine, Matheson and Co., Ltd.

Shanghai circles are paticularly interested in the fine exhibition made by the Yangtsze and the Far Eastern, under the management of Mr. C. M. G. Burnie, 1922 shows as the Yangtsze's best year with a balance to working account of $2,221,996.17, and the 1921 and previous years working accounts running off at better figures than originally estimated. The Yangtsze's volume of business shows a steady increase, and the management are to be congratulated upon consistent growth and conservative management, limiting their dividends to only 20 percent, and carrying forward substantial sums to working account and reserves.

FAR EASTERN'S REPORT

The Far Eastern report shows that last year was far better than the average for this young company, which is under the control of the Yangtsze management. By limiting dividends to six percent

JAPANESE FIRED AT CHANGSHA TO SAVE OWN LIVES

First Tried To Frighten Boycott Mob With Blank Cartridges

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, June 4.—Advices from Changsha give details of the attack of the Japanese on June 1st. When the Buryo Maru, belonging to a Sino-Japanese steamship company, entered the port an immense crowd assembled at the wharf and made a hostile demonstration. The Japanese Consulate, learning of it, despatched several of the Consular staff to the wharf, at the same time appealing to the gunboat Fushimi for marines with a view to maintaining communications between the Consulate and the steamer as the telephone could not be relied upon.

The Japanese were surrounded, beaten, kicked and spat upon. This situation was reported to the Japanese Consulate which again appealed to the Fushimi. The gunboat landed a small party and the latter was also surrounded and stoned. In order to clear a passage the blue-jackets fired a blank round. This evidently led the crowd to believe that the blue-jackets were without ammunition and they attempted to disarm the sailors, who thereupon fired, killing two and wounding six others. The sailors then returned to the Fushimi, leaving marines to maintain the line of communications.

The latest telegrams from Changsha indicate that the hostility of the Chinese is so intense that Japanese women and children will probably be obliged to leave Changsha.

Boy Scout Troops Holding Jamboree This Afternoon

Keen Competitions Expected In Annual Contests

The Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs of the Baden Powell Boy Scouts Association and the Boy Scouts of America are holding their Jamboree, which was postponed from Empire Day, today at 4 p.m. on their camp grounds, the entrance to which is near 97 Yu Yuen Road.

The boys have been looking forward with the utmost eagerness to this Jamboree, which promises to be a keen competition between the Troops and Packs in their respective events. In arranging the events the aim has been to illustrate certain branches of the Scout and Cub training and there should be no lack of interest. Particularly interesting will be the huts which the various Troops have erected on their respective sections of the grounds. Signalling, camp pitching, cooking, first aid all have their place, and the Wolf Cubs too will do their best to show what they can do.

Tickets will be on sale at the gate at $1, children half price.

"Not Again For Million" Says Bandits' Captive Returned To Shanghai

Mr. Manuel Verea Tells Of Dangers Faced By Foreigners Still Held; Sanitary Conditions "Terrible"

Yesterday three of the foreigners captured by the Lincheng bandits returned to Shanghai. Their views of the situation were not so cheerful as previous messages may have led the population here to rely on. The remaining eight foreign prisoners and the hundred-odd Chinese held in the encampment are in danger—not so much from the bandits as from the conditions in which they are living. Disease has raised its ugly head in the mountain fastness.

"Conditions in the camp at the Temple of the Clouds are frightening," said Mr. Manuel Verea, Mexican capitalist, who with his wife, was captured and was among the last released by the outlaws. "The area in which the captives are being held, a restricted plot of about 200 by 150 feet, is becoming indescribably dirty and is the mecca of millions of flies which are making the lives of the prisoners a nightmare, despite the nets sent up by the relief expedition."

Word reached here yesterday that typhus had broken out in the neighborhood of the bandit stronghold. But of this Mr. Verea said he had heard nothing. The only apparent illness he was appraised of before leaving was that of a Chinese confined in the temple occupied by Messrs. Musso, Powell, and Friedman and this was not believed to be of serious nature. The prisoners, he said were still being kept in isolated groups in the Temple of the Clouds area and while they had been given considerable freedom lately they still had no information regarding the progress of the negotiations for their release and so were as much in the dark regarding the future as ever, though the tension had been much relieved by the release of those who came out previously.

PRAISES RELIEF WORK

"The great alleviating factor in the whole thing," Mr. Verea said, "has been the work of the Shanghai American Chamber of Commerce and the American Red Cross in getting supplies through to the outlaws' lair. Since good food, camp cots, mosquito nets and encouragement has been filtering through to the unhappy band 'inside' life among the bandits has not been so unbearable. In fact, if this aid had not come through I fear that we might be reviewing a much more serious situation."

And this is born out by Mr. and Mrs. Verea's early experience after the Lincheng hold-up. For three days they were—besides being almost constantly on the move—without any food that they could touch and without water. On the fourth day the newly married couple had their first meal, a pair of raw eggs. True, Mr. Verea, stated the bandits offered their hostages the menu of the country—dough balls, garlic flooded bean cake and the like—but they could not partake. Water was scarce—hardly enough for drinking purposes until the relief party began sending in cases of silent water—when ablutions became possible.

GAVE THEM COURAGE

"You cannot say too much for Mr. Carl Crow and the American Chamber of Commerce and Red Cross," declared the released prisoner. "They were the salvation of us all. We were almost without hope until their 'express' trains began coming to our aid, and it was the food and comforts and the news from the outside which they bore to us that enabled us all to bear up under the strain."

"But," continued the returned captive, "notwithstanding everything that is being done for the prisoners—and everything possible is being done for them—they must be released soon. The danger is increasing. Insantiary conditions and flies. The flies are terrible. Swarms of them, settling over everything. And sanitary conditions are growing worse every day. The bandits do not seem to worry about it so much, but to the foreign hostages it is a growing terror and a real menace."

Accompanying Mr. Verea to Shanghai were Mr. Eddie Elias and Mr. Theodore Saphiere, both of this city. Each of them endorsed Mr. Verea's appraisal of the

SAP CLUB BANDIT RADIO STATION PUT ON HUMMER

Removal Of Solomon And Pinger Changes Plans

(Special To The China Press)

Tsaochuang, June 2.—The swan song of one of the first attempts to introduce wireless in the interior of China was sung in a letter Major Wallace C. Philoon, American Military Attache, received from Major Roland Pinger last night.

Major Pinger, who with Major Allen and Lee Solomon, has been a member of the Sap Club, and has been imprisoned on top of Paotzuku, wrote from the lower camp after, he and Solomon had been removed.

After explaining that their removal would end the flash signalling Major Pinger confessed they were just a bit reluctant to leave.

"We are a little bit reluctant for we have put in some hard work on our joint, Major Pinger wrote, "paving our front yard with broken brick, fixing up the paths and roads. Isn't it funny how one can get attached to his home even if it is leased from his half-civilised captors.

"However, the Sap Club is by no means a thing of the past. It is now under canvas in the inner courtyard of the Cloud Temple, with a fly in front for a verandah. It is already the social center of the camp. The little tin sign hangs on the tent pole and above the 'A' is punched a little star in memory of Allen, the first charter member to go on the non-resident list. Solomon and I have agreed that the last man gets the sign."

The signalling Major Pinger writes of was instituted by Major Philoon and British Consul-General Tours of Tsinanfu. Major Philoon sent the Sap Club a copy of the Morse code when he learned that from their elevated position they could see the lights of the little mining town here every night. The British Consul-General, assisted by Mr. Fritz Modde, the young German electrical engineer who is here installing mining machinery for the Chung Hsing mines, then performed the actual signalling each night from 9 until 10, using the big searchlight on the compound walls. The gigantic searchlight was erected in order to play around the walls each night and guard against a surprise attack by the bandits who have apparently infested this region since the Year One.

At first the signallers used the regulation dot and dash system in sending. The two Army majors and Solomon had difficulty in receiving correctly, however, and the sending was later changed to the dots on the left hand side of the light and the dashes on the right hand side. In addition to the technical details the receivers had to cope with the bandits. On several occasions it was necessary for Allen and Solomon to use the greatest tact in keeping the sentries away from the parapet where Pinger stood to receive the signals so that the dots and dashes could be copied down. Mah-jongg, offers of free cabbage-leaf seegars and other entrancing cumsha were used on successive occasions, according to letters from Solomon to THE CHINA PRESS and the majors at the time.

No mention was made of the flashlight signals at the time they were being attempted for fear the bandits would learn of them through their underground wireless and put a stop to it.

American School Class Has Baccalaureate Sermon

An eloquent baccalaureate sermon was preached Sunday afternoon by the Rev. Clifford M. Drury at the Masonic Hall in connection with the graduating week exercises of the Shanghai American School.

The Masonic Hall was filled with relatives and friends of the graduating class, numbering thirteen. Following is the list of those receiving diplomas:

Frances Bowen	Sungkiang
Elliott Fisher	Canton
Thomas Grafton	Haichow
Paul Harvey	Shanghai
Cecile Keyserling	Vladivostok
William Lockwood	Shanghai
Alexander Moffett	K'iangyin
Vanda Newhard	Vladivostok
Eugene Parker	Shanghai
Mary Rice	Haichow
Henry Skinner	Yenping
Roberta White	Shanghai
William Woods	Tsingkiangpu

The invocation then was delivered by Mr. W. W. Lockwood, after which responsive readings were led by Rev. R. A. Parker. The Gloria was sung and the Madrigal Club gave Gounod's Send Out Thy Light, as an anthem. After the scripture lesson, Dr. F. J. White led in prayer and the Madrigal Club gave Sullivan's O Gladsome Lights as a response.

An address was then made by Rev. Clifford M. Drury on the topic, the Unveiling of Jesus Christ. After a hymn, the benediction was pronounced by Mr. W. W. Bartlett, principal of the school. Mr. Drury's address in full follows:

ADDRESS TO GRADUATES

My remarks, this afternoon, are to be addressed especially to the members of the class of 1923 of the Shanghai American School. For four years you have been pursuing your high school course. You have now approached one of the milestones of life when you pause to take cognisance of some of the great guiding principles of life. I am glad that they do not call the last day of your course, "Ending day." I am glad that it is called "Commencement day." And so this afternoon I am not going to turn your attention to the days that have gone but I would have you look into the tomorrows for which your work here has been but a commencement.

My subject is "The Unveiling of Jesus Christ." As students, truth has been unveiled to you all through your high school course. Veils of ignorance, of misunderstanding, and of prejudice have been drawn back and you have seen truth revealed. It has been the business of your teachers to reveal truth.

As a minister of the gospel, it is my special privilege to reveal truths concerning our God and especially to reveal Jesus Christ. The whole New Testament is the literature of revelation. That which was veiled in the old is unveiled in the new. That which was latent became potent. The Gospels deal with the unveiling of the historical Christ. The splitting of the veil which hung before the Holy of Holies was filled with symbolism. The crucifixion of Christ revealed to us a God of love who would die for men. As we continue through the New Testament, we see everywhere curtains being pulled back and truth revealed. Christ is unveiled, explained, revealed in every book until we reach the last book which we call Revelation.

Over this book in the King-James version we read the title:

PARLEY TAKES TURN FOR WORSE; PRIEST SENT OUT OF CAMP!

Negotiations Take "Extremely Ticklish" Turn, Lehrbas Wires; Outlaws Showing Increasingly Mean Attitude; Dissention In Ranks Of Government Officials Also Prove Hindrance To Immediate Release Of Remaining Captives

By Lloyd ("Larry") Lehrbas
(China Press Staff Correspondent)

Tsaochuang, June 4.—The negotiations with the bandits have taken an extremely ticklish turn, due to dissentions among the bandits factions. The officials representing the tuchun and the government are also at loggerheads on some points, which makes matters still worse.

As showing the temper of the outlaws, they ordered Father Potte, a medical missionary, to leave their camp today. He reported that the bandits are showing an increasingly mean spirit.

The Peking military mission made its second inspection today and will return to the capital tomorrow.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tsaochuang, June 3.—Although Four more foreigners have been released and hope for the speedy return of all has consequently been renewed, no definite date can be fixed for their release. The negotiations are going on as well or even better than was expected, though it will yet take a few days for their completion.

Apart from the resulting slight improvement as the preliminaries are disposed of, the real position remains the same. The majority of the bandits are willing to join the army and are yearning for this purpose and the Government and Gentry delegates are doing their best to hurry things up. The only possible hitch is in the still hostile attitude of the old bandits. They are hostile not against the foreigners but against their comrades' intention to enlist. They would much prefer to remain the outlaw tenants of Paotzuku and the neighbourhood and it is feared that they may be tempted to throw difficulties in the way of the present arrangement.

Whispers of the impending release of some foreign captives were rife in the Relief Camp as early as Friday and convinced of at least the partial truth of the reports your correspondent accompanied a small guard who set out about 9 p.m. to meet the foreigners they so confidently expected.

The result was a long ramble in the approach valley to Paotzuku with soldiers who frankly confessed their ignorance of the countryside, persuading villagers reluctantly to leave the doubtful comforts of their mud huts and put them on the narrow winding path which led to Wuchiao, the half-way house to Paotzuku.

Though it was past midnight, there was considerable activity in the village. Wuchiao is, of course, the venue of the delegates for the recent and present discussions and marks the border of bandit and soldier territory. The officer in charge confirmed the story that foreign captives were to be released and said that after Friday's conference it was stated that eight captives were to be set free. Sedan chairs were at once sent up, these having been sent from Tsaochuang the same morning in anticipation of release. However, an all night watch at the mines ended with still no captives returned.

Yesterday morning, however, the bandit express, who also failed to put in an appearance the night before, said the captives had left Paotzuku and a second messenger shortly after brought the news that four were approaching the Relief Camp. The four were Ancira Verea, Eddie Elias, Theo Saphiere and Jerome Henley. They brought up the rear of a large party, the gentry, Government delegates and four bandit representatives coming into Tsaochuang with them. A little way ahead were three Chinese who weer released, two of them car boys and the third a medical student who has studied in Germany.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tsaochuang, June 3.—The Military Commission arrived yesterday and commenced investigation's this morning. The Commission were received with a guard of honor.

General Connor, giving the purpose of the Commission said: "We have come at the request of the Diplomatic Corps to obtain accurate information as regards the situation. As military men and trained observers we can obtain information which would be impossible for others. We are to have no dealings with the bandits, direct or otherwise, but are merely here to make a report to the Diplomatic Body on our findings."

It is anticipated that the Commission will remain here for three or four days.

LIQUOR CARGOES TO BE BARRED IN THREE MILE ZONE

Treasury Issues Instructions In Accordance With High Court Ruling

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, June 4.—The Treasury Department has issued Shipping Liquor Regulations strictly in accordance with the Supreme Court's decision, prohibiting the entry of liquor into territorial waters, exeption being solely granted for liquor for medicinal use and for the use of the Diplomatic Corps and foreign warships.

The treasury states that the request of the foreign Powers for amelioration can only be granted by legislation in Congress.

(Reuter's Service)

New York, June 4.—The "Wets" of Wisconsin and other States are planning to introduce similar action to that taken by New York State in repealing the prohibition enforcement. Washington admits that the Government is faced with a huge task by the withdrawal of the State enforcement officers, B ootleggers are reported to be active but there has not been a noticeable increase in liquor arrests.

No More Loans To China, Decision Of Consortium

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 4.—The Diplomatic Correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, referring to the meeting of the Consortium Committee in Paris, states that it recommended that there should be no further loans to China until the increases in the China Customs dues, stipulated in the Washington Treaties, had been duly carried out.

The proposal had been mooted for a temporary advance of £3,000,000 to enable Peking to cope with its present difficulties, but it was apparently considered that this should be conditioned on a satisfactory footing by the "normalisation" of hitherto relatively unsecured Chinese bonds. This would be a complicated task

The correspondent mentions that Italy was recently sounded on the possibility of her joining the Consortium, but that she is hesitating to provide the necessary large amounts.

at Friday's conference between the gentry, Government delegates and the bandit chiefs. The delegates went out to commence enrollment of the bandits into the army, or rather, to begin the registration of rifle and revolver holders.

Bobo Lieu, who has been recognised as the aggressive leader of the professional bandit faction, expressed dissatisfaction that the others were joining the army. This led to a discussion which must have become a trifle warmer than heated, for we are told that it ended with Lieu threatening the life of General Chen, and so incensed that the conference was all but broken up.

Sun Mei-yao and Kuo Chih-tsa played the role of peace-makers, and supported by the other moderate leaders among the bandits they persuaded Lieu to take a more reasonable view of things, and the conference was resumed. It was quite late in the day when the work of registration was commenced, and this accounted for the delegation having to stay the night, and return with the released captives in the morning.

It is understood that the moderate element among the bandits suggested that those who wish to enlist shall be allowed to do so, and that any who refuse, a delicate way of saying any who wish to remain bandits, shall form their own group, and assume responsibility for their own safety. Bobo Lieu's following have already stated that they do not wish for any ransom from the foreigners.

When the delegations, both from the Government and the bandits, arrived at Tsaochuang yesterday, they almost immediately had a conference with the Deputy Tuchun, in addition to which Kuo Chih-tsai and Sun Fung saw the consuls. Everything proceeded smoothly and the delegations, or the greater part of them, went back early in the afternoon. Two of the bandit representatives, however, have remained here.

The conference, which presumably means the continuance of registration and enrollment, is being held again today.

The official view of affairs is that prospects of an early release are bright.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tsaochuang, June 3.—The four captives who returned yesterday, Ancira Veres, Theo Saphiere, Eddie Elias and Jerome Henley, bring back fairly cheerful news from the bandit camp. They are all agreed that conditions are better than they have been since they were captured, a state of affairs due largely, if not entirely, to the unflagging efforts to get proper provisions, supplies of all sorts, and news up to the camp.

Recently, probably owing to the favorable nature of the negotiations the captives have been allowed more freedom, though a letter from Solomon which was received yesterday gives another side to this. Solomon mentioned that they were allowed more liberties, but he added "the bandits have little respect, and will spit in front of us. If you object, they think nothing of pointing a rifle or revolver at you, and threatening to shoot."

Mr. Verea's release is particularly appropriate. He left Tsaochuang this morning, and arrives in Shanghai to be reunited to Mrs. Verea on the anniversary of their wedding day.

Mr. Verea, who is a Mexican, told me that being captured by bandits was no new experience for him, for he has been twice in the hands by Mexican outlaws. The big difference between them was that the Mexicans wanted money, and the ransom was speedily paid. His Chinese experience has considerably more hardship. The only thing he has saved is a pair of cuff links. These Mr. Verea got from Mr. Rowlatt who bought them from one of the bandits for $2.

From accounts told by the other released captives, the bandits seem to remain strictly in their own Bands, and they do not hesitate to rob members of bands other than their own.

All four ex-captives were looking extremely well, a hot bath and a shave working a miracle in their appearance. Mr. Saphiere had an unfortunate experience yesterday evening, however, when in stepping out of a railway car he slipped off the edge of the raised platform on to the metals. He was badly bruised, and was attended by the Red Cross section.

The foreigners still in the hands of the bandits are all well, Mr. Musso continuing steadily to improve.

Tsinanfu, June 3.—Another bandit raid on an extensive scale occurred just northeast of the city yesterday, when twenty-nine villages were looted, burned and razed. Over two hundred and fifty persons were seized and held to ransom and about sixty others were killed.

It has reliably been ascertained that no foreign resident or missionary was harmed. For this reason, it is said, the authorities are indifferent thereby arousing public indignation.

The night express service of the Tsinan-Kiaochow Railway has been suspended since yesterday.

Peking, June 4.—It is reported from Tsaochuang that the enrolment of the bandits is proceeding. Some of the bandits, however, do not desire to join the army and are accordingly departing leaving their arms.

Peking, June 4.—It is reported from Tsingtao that bandits are active in the vicinity of Laoshan. The Chief of Police is energetic. Between two and ten executions are occurring Daily.

It is understood that the Police warned the foreign authorities of the dangers of parties of tourists going out to Laoshan. The authorities replied urging that the district should be cleared of bandits.

'Face Savers' Association Takes In New Member

(Special To The China Press)

Tsaochuang, June 2.—The Royal Order of Four-Flushers, composed of various and sundry Chinese officials who have butted in on the negotiations being conducted in an effort to secure the release of the foreign captives on Paotzuku, in hopes of securing "face" have a new candidate for admission to their enchanted circle.

The new candidate in Mr. Thomas King, who visited Lincheng as a member of the Protocal Department, the President's Office and the Secretariat, Waichiapu, in an investigation of the bandit outrage, and departed again after a period of innocuous desuetude.

Mr. King, according to a special dispatch to the Peking Daily News, erupted several statements that are as far from the facts as possible, chiefly in defense of the worthy Tuchun of Shantung.

In a 'memorandum of An Audience with The President' Mr. King writes as follows:

"The Portuguese and British Ministers were very favorably inclined towards the said proposal. But the Portuguese Minister could not but doubt the ability of the Shantung troops in suppressing the bandits by force. In reply I said that I was not personally acquainted with General Tien Chung-yu, the Military Governor of Shantung, nor did I understand the military affairs of Shantung. But during my one week's sojourn at Tsaochuang I personally saw General Tien going to the battlefield and sleeping on the train, sometimes without even food or rest. His subordinates were equally serious in their work."

In the minds of the foreigners attached to the relief mission here the above paragraph is one of the most ludicrous bits yet written about the bandit raid and fully deserving of perpetual safe-keeping in Punch, Life, the Mupicipal Gazette and Joe Miller's Jokebook. In the first place Tuchun Tien confined his movements at Tsaochuang to short trips about the enclosed compound guarded by about twenty armed-to-the-teeth bodyguards. The longest walk he is known to have taken was to a little temple about five minutes out of the city gate. He never visited the battlefield or got within seven miles of it despite Mr. King's telescopic eye.

The Tuchun slept on a train That much of the statement is correct. Fortunately there was a train here for him to sleep on, attached to which was his private car with all the comforts of home and a regiment of coolies to wait upon him hand and foot.

The Tuchun's appearance—the Tuchun is built on the general architectural lines of a squat California bungalow with protudant bay-window—belies the insinuation that he ever went without food. If he did he was quite foolish because there are numerous places, including his private dining car, where he could at least have gotten a ham sandwich.

The Tuchun did stay up until 2 or 3 o'clock on several occassions in conferences over the situation, but on several other nights, to the knowledge of the newspaper correspondents, he stayed up even later indulging in the pleasant pastime of Mah-jongg.

Mr. King's defense of Tuchun Tien is laudable, from his standpoint, but woefully weak from a standpoint of accuracy. As one foreigner here said: "Even if it were all true wasn't it the Tuchun's business to be here on the job?"

Why Mr. King should confess his ignorance of the military affairs of Shantung is also a mystery. It is common property to every one else that Tuchun Tien has not paid his troops for 18 months although he is said to have received the money to pay them, and that for a considerable time there was a question, in the minds of both foreigners and Chinese here, whether or not the troops would revolt against the Tuchun. General Chien, the Defense Commissioner of Hschowfu, was impressed sufficiently with the sad state he found General Tien's troops to keep 1,200 of his own crack men at Lincheng within easy calling distance if the expected did happen.

By unanimous vote of the foreigners attached to the relief mission Mr. Thomas King has been duly nominated for election to the select order along with Admiral Wu Yu-lin, General Yang I-ieh, Wu Pei-fu, Tsao Kun, the Tuchun himself and several minor officials and investigators who have come to Tsaochuang to indulge in plenty of 'talkee-talkee' but no action.

"Boy," page Mr. Thomas King."

Two Prominent Italian Residents Leave For Home

Yesterday, by the Empress of Canada two of the oldest residents of the Italian Colony left Shanghai for good.

One is Mr. L. Camera, who came out to China in 1893 as silk inspector for Lintilhac and Co. He joined Jardine Matheson and Co. soon after and has been in their service ever since. He retires to his native land at this new residence in Florence.

The other member is Mr. A. L. Clerici, who was also connected with Jardine's for seventeen years, having resigned in 1915 when transfered to Yokohama. In 1918 he started business on his own account as silk and general merchant, and he now retires to Italy in Como. A pupil of the late Mr. George Lanning, he is well known by the Shanghai boys. Last week he was entertained by the Comprador and staff of Messrs. Clerici, Bedoni and Co. and presented with a beauiful Tientsin carpet. He was also a guest of the Native Silk merchants.

Conditions They Attach Arouse Storm Of Opposition From Socialists

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 2.—The "Financier and Bullionist" is of the opinion that the situation in the silver market is likely soon to undergo important modification, with the cessation of purchases under the Pittman Act. As regards the fall in the price, this is more or less inevitable, the "Financier" states, as a result of increased available supplies for ordinary customers. The extent of the fall will depend upon the extent of the revival of trade in the Far East, but, if commercial depression rules, prices, will probably fall, making production unprofitable by the low-grade mines in countries other than America, where silver is mined largely in association with copper.

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, June 2.—President Harding today discussed the tariff situation with Mr. Marvin, the Chairman of the Tariff Commission. It was afterwards announced at the White House that the President will not consider a modification of the sugar tariff with a view to reducing sugar prices because this would discourage development of the domestic sugar industry.

London, June 3.—There is a keen expectation that Germany's new reparations offer will be delivered this week.

The industrial magnates have formally offered the German Government a proportion of their assets as a guarantee for payments to the Allies. The offer is accompanied by conditions, including the private management of railways and other State services and the abolition of foreign trade control and the eight-hour day, these have evoked strong opposition from the Socialists, who demand that the guaranteers should take the form of more adequate taxation of the rich. The Socialists have warned the Cabinet of the danger of offering too little and the necessity of making a more serious effort to come to terms.

Meanwhile, there are indications of a change in the atmosphere in France and Belgium. The latter now favors a joint Belgian, French, British and Italian answer to the next German offer. If France agrees to this proposal at the forthcoming conference of the French and Belgian Premiers, it is the British Government's opportunity to intervene more effectively with a view to a general Allied and German agreement.

Mr. Baldwin, as his speech accepting the Conservative leadership indicated, has put European settlement in the very forefront of his policy and, according to the observer's diplomatic correspondent, the Prime Minister has been taking a determined line recently in the direction of persauding the French to take a more reasonable view of Germany's capacity to pay.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, June 3.—The former Premier, M. Briand, made a speech at Nantes yesterday, in the course of which he proclaimed that the acts of violence committed by the Royalists in no way represented the mentality of France. Referring to the question of the occupation of the Ruhr, he declared that from the very first he had accorded his support to the Poincare Cabinet.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, June 3.—The London correspondent of the Temps states that the Treasury are preparing a new reparations plan.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, June 3.—M. Poincare has addressed a Note to London with regard to the British suggestion to establish a commission of the League of Nations to enquire into the decree, promulgated in the Saar Valley, imposing heavy fines and imprisonment for criticising the Treaty of Versailles or the administration under it, including the League of Nations.

It is reliably stated that the Note defends the legality of the decree and contends that the Saar Commission cannot be placed under the League of Nations control. Nevertheless, the Note states that the exceptional measures taken for the preservation of order will be suspended as being no longer necessary.

TOWN GUARD, THE FAVORITE, SENT TO EPSOM TRACK

Derby Entry, Reported Injured, Apparently In Good Trim

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 4.—Hotspur of the Daily Telegraph writing late last night says that the case of Town Guard is more serious than was supposed, probably consequent on the work to which the colt was subjected yesterday morning. The seat of the mischief is in the shoulder.

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 4.—It is reported from Newmarket that the Derby favorite, Town Guard, and his stable companion, Knockando, were boxed this morning for Epsom. They both looked fit and well.

Soviet Not Likely To Accept Japanese Recognition Terms

Tokio, June 4.—Soviet Russia must accept the conditions laid down by the Japanese Government as a preliminary to the opening of negotiations looking to a possible restoration of relations.

This attitude of the Cabinet will be conveyed to M. Joff after its meeting on June 6 at the same time as Japan's minimum conditions, which, well-informed persons state, include extraordinary concessions.

Nevertheless, it is regarded as extremely doubtful if Moscow will immediately accept Japan's terms. Indecision is expected to continue over a considerable period.

The more conservative element is becoming alarmed at the extent of propaganda in favor of establishment of relations with the Soviet, which has ostensibly been promoted by commercial interests though it is asserted that the hand of the International can be distinguished and, undoubtedly, the number of active supporters of the Soviet is increasing.

Chinese Police Official Denies Opium Increases

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 3.—Mr. Chu Chao-hsin, speaking before the League of Nations Opium Commission on May 29, opposed the request of the Hongkong Government for 10 more chests of Indian opium every month. He said that if the Hongkong Government wanted to suppress opium smuggling it was very easy to do so.

Mr. Chu, in conclusion, expressed the opinion that the British Government was sincerely and honestly trying to carry out the provisions of the Hague Convention as shown by its asking the League's permission to import Indian opium when it could easily have secretly arranged for its transport. He did not object to an increase of only 10 chests but he must ask why it was required.

(Reuter's Service)

Geneva, June 2.—The League of Nations Opium Commission today unanimously adopted the amended motion by Sir Malcolm Delevingne on the subject of the United States proposals.

The resolution provides that the employment of opium in accordance with the usage in India shall be declared legitimate under the terms of the Convention; that the employment of prepared opium shall be held to be legitimate as far as its use accords with Section Two of the Opium Convention; and that the production and export of raw opium shall be legitimate under the terms of the Convention.

The Commission proposes that the Council of the League shall endeavour to secure agreements of precise limitation of the production of manufactured drugs and of reduction in the quantities of raw opium imported into possessions where its usage continues to be recognised.

(Reuter's Service)

New York, May 3.—Chinese police authorities are more successful in checking the activities of opium bootleggers than the police of this country in combatting whisky bootleggers, declared Mr. C. P. Wang, chief police inspector of Nanking, who is visiting New York as a delegate to the International Police Conference.

Inspector Wang denied the recent statement of Mrs. Hamilton Wright, assessor of the Opium advisory Commission of the League of nations, that opium growing, as well as the smuggling of opium, was on the increase in China.

Sun's Forces Lead In New Fighting

(Reuters Pacific Service)

Canton, June 4.—Mr. Hu Hanmin, the former Governor of Kwangtung, is acting on behalf of the Generalissimo, Dr. Sun Yat-sen, in Canton during the latter's absence at Shekiung, in the East River district, directing operations which have so far been favorable to the Constitutionalists.

The Chinese Navy in Canton waters is remaining loyal to Dr. Sun Yat-sen although the Commandant, Admiral Wen Shih-tek, has been dismissed because of suspicious actions. Admiral Wen is going to Hongkong. It is alleged that he will join General Chen Chiung-ming.

Canton is quiet except for some excitement due to the drafting of coolies for military transportation.

POINCARE SAYS U.S. STANDS WITH FRANCE ON RUHR

Pleads For Continuance Of Friendly Relations

(French Wireless)

Paris, June 31.—At Chaumont, Pres. Millerand presided over the inauguration of the monument in memory of Franco-American friendship.

Ambassador Myron J. Herrick read a message from President Harding expressing the wish that the friendship between the two nations which had been renewed during the war would become strong in years and that prosperity would ever accompany revivified France.

In his speech Ambassador Herrick eulogised the power of democracy, saluted the dead French and recalled the arrival in France of two million Americans and the participation of 1,296,000 in battles fought for the common cause and the destruction of Prussian militarism.

The Allied combatants, he said, are now relying on the governments which are engaged in a gigantic peace-battle on which depends the future tranquility of the world in order to realise legitimate hopes.

Premier Poincare declared that America cannot remain indifferent to the efforts of France to assure with her European Allies the realisation of the pacific treaty of Versailles. He recalled that the desperate German propaganda had not tarnished their friendship, America herself repulsing the poisoned foolishness when France entered the Ruhr. America did not believe the German alleging that France and Belgium were in the toils of a mania for conquest.

He thought that France was right to rely upon herself for the execution of the treaty.

Speaking at the banquet of the inauguration of the memorial to Franco-American friendship President Millerand recalled "as friends across the Atlantic let us place independence at the top of all but refuge to found liberty on the domination of neighbouring peoples.

"We are respecting the liberty of others and want ours to be respected," he said. "We have fought with the Allies in order to save the independence and dignity of populations forced from their mother-country. Since the end of hostilities we are pursuing only respect for treaties. Only the dishonesty of Germany has led us into the Ruhr. Our will based upon justice should not yield."

He concluded by expressing spirited wishes for the restoration of Russia and remembered with moving gratitude the help which came at the tragic hour from across the sea.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, June 3.—M. Millerand today unveiled a monument at Chaumont to French and American friendship.

The American Ambassador read a message from President Harding, hoping that the friendship of the two nations, renewed during the war, will grow stronger with years, and that prosperity will accompany for ever revivified France.

In a speech, the American Ambassador extolled democracy and saluted the French dead. He recalled the arrival in France of 2,000,000 Americans and the participation of 1,269,000 in the combats for the common cause of the destruction of Prussian militarism. He said that the Allied combatants were now relying on the Governments, which were engaged in the gigantic battle of peace, on which depended the future of the world, for the realisation of their legitimate hopes.

German Cigarettes Invading Japan

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, May 29.—German cigarettes, owing to their cheapness, threaten to monopolise the Japanese tobacco market. Within the past month or two, nearly 100,000 boxes of imported German cigarettes have been consumed in this country. The Government Monopoly Bureau is preparing, it is said, to check the import of German cigarettes by raising import duties. Negotiations are being carried on by tobacco traders here for the import of German tobacco on a great scale before the tariff wall can be built up.

Chang Tso-lin Tries To Buy Aeroplanes

Manila, June 4.—The Manila Times reports that General Cheng is now in Manila negotiating for the purchase on behalf of General Chang Tso-lin of five Curtis planes, formerly used by the Philippine Air Service. Owing to the embargo on war materials to China, Governor-General Wood has cabled to Washington requesting a ruling. Negotiations are also pending with regard to army airmen who might be willing to serve under the Chinese.

Insurance Firms Have Good Year

the working account balance has been increased from Tls. 214,092 in 1921 to Tls. 561,546. Both of these Shanghai concerns wrote off investment losses, principally loans on vessels, during the year, and their investments are in good order with a satisfactory yield.

The Union Insurance Society of Canton which has now become one of the world's largest fire and marine companies, closed a satisfactory year. This institution should really not be treated alone, however, as it owns and controls the China Fire, British Traders and the North China—Virtually a fleet of insurance companies.

Of these, the China Fire is perhaps in the strongest position, and distributed dividends of 50 percent on the paid-up shares. The larger company, the Union of Canton, does a world-wide business and reports a premium income for the year of $1,417,972. This is somewhat less than reported in 1921, but losses were also less, so that the 1922 underwriting experience was distinctly better than for the previous year.

The working account of the Union Insurance last year shows a balance of £670,586, which with £400,593 from the 1921 account and thoroughly adequate reserves built up over the period of many years justifies the final and interim dividends of £2 per share (50 percent of the original paid-up value) decided upon by the Directors. Earnings on investments showed a marked decrease from the previous year's figures which was fortunately offset by a good underwriting experience.

QUERY—"IS A POOR REPUTATION BETTER THAN NONE AT ALL?"

Great Throng Sees Soccer Champions In Game Here

BY K. S. CHANG

Before a crowd of approximately five thousand, persons the largest crowd that ever turned out to watch a football game in this city, the South China football team, the champions of this year's Far Eastern Olympic Games, defeated the East China Team Sunday afternoon on the Chinese Recreation Ground at West Gate. The score was 3 to 1.

Although the game was scheduled to start at four, football fans, who, with a few exceptions, were all Chinese, began to pour into the ground soon after noon without interruption. Admission was charged at thirty cents, and an extra 60 cents was charged for a grand stand seat. At three, the crowd that encircled the field was already four or five deep. In spite of the heat the spectators waited patiently for the footballers. Association football is indeed the most popular game among the Chinese.

The crowd was nevertheless well rewarded with an afternoon's excellent sport, for it was a spectacular and thrilling game from start to finish. Even many old timers declared after the game that it was the best game they ever saw in their lives. It would have been better still, however, if the losers had been under training.

HONGKONG ATTACKS

Hongkong started to attack from first whistle, and soon broken off by the Shanghai defence which was supported, by, "Big" Shen of Nanyang and Y. T. Har of the Chinese Recs. on the back line, with Wong, Liang, and Chang on the half line. East, China immediately returned, but their attacks were futile, as the Hongkong fullbacks and half backs were like iron gates.

After about a quarter of an hour, the game grew a little rough. Hongkong missed some chances to score. Li, the left in of the southern team, twice missed the goal only a few inches.

Forty minutes passed without any score on either side. Then the champions pressed hard. Li brought the ball forward and passed it to Wang Pak, Cheong, the center forward who, only a few yards from the goal, sent it in with a very swift shot and scored the first goal.

The locals tried hard to even up after this. But owing to the fact that they had been out of the game a few months their combination work was not well carried out. The right side of the forward line was weak and inefficient, and consequently, their attacks were not forceful. At the Interval, Hongkong 1, Shanghai 0.

SECOND HALF

The second half opened with some fast plays. About eight minutes after, a penalty kick was called on the southern team. Har took it and scored with a fast shot to the left side of the goal.

With the score at one to one, the Hongkong team again threatened. In fact the ball was in the territory of the Shanghai team during the most part of the second half. After about 30 minutes, Li, who played very well for the champions, scored the second goal by shooting the ball with a drop kick near the back line. The ball was at a very high speed and the Shanghai goaler had no time to stop it. Things went on slowly after then, and it seemed as if the game would end by two to one. But in the last minute Hongkong scored the third goal, again by Wang, the center forward.

On the whole the winners played a much better game, because they were all in form. They excelled the local players in nearly every department of the game, and deserved the victory. But considering the fact that Shanghai players had been out of the game for so long we must admit that they put up a quite satisfactory showing.

"Big" Shen starred for the locals on the back line, with Ning and Liang playing good ball on the forward line. Both goalies were excellent and both deserve credit for several good saves.

K. T. Yuen handled the game to the satisfaction of both sides.

TABLE TENNIS

A friendly game of table tennis between Nanyang University and the Y.M.C.A. Day School was held Saturday at 2 o'clock in the Y.M.C.A. The score was 3-4 in favor of Y.M.C.A. Messrs. Vong and David Kung were referees.

FRENCHMAN NEW WORLD'S CHAMP FEATHERWEIGHT

Eugene Criqui Knocks Out Johnny Kilbane In Sixth Round

(Reuter's Service)

New York, June 2.—Eugene Criqui, the European champion, knocked out Johnny Kilbane, the holder, in the sixth round of a boxing contest here this evening for the Featherweight Championship of the World.

Kilbane fought mostly on the defensive, always awaiting a right.

In the first round Kilbane jabbed his opponent several times on the nose and hooked with his chance to send over his famous left to the jaw.

In the second round Criqui was cautioned for hitting low.

In the third the Frenchman landed rights and lefts to the head.

In the fourth there were heavy exchanges of rights and lefts.

In the fifth Criqui penetrated

Kilbane's defence and punished the American on the body and head.

Fine Racing At Henli, American Eight Victors

The second day of the Shanghai Rowing Club's spring regatta at Henli opened in good weather which continued all day. The big event on the card for Sunday was the international eights, at one and a half miles. This was won by the American crew, with England second and Scotland third. The race was a beauty throughout, with England setting the pace in the early stages. Neal, the American cox, showed nice judgment of pace, however, and held his men steadily until near the finish. He then called for the final burst of speed and it was forthcoming, the crew sweeping over the line considerably in advance of the English eight.

The Junior Pairs event was won Messrs. Woodhead and Watton, with D. Campbell cox.

The International pairs was also won by the Americans, E. S. J. Phillips and C. J. Doughty, with G. M. Neal, cox, sweeping over the line ahead of the English duo.

Campaigners For Church Fund Show Four Fold Need

The "four-fold responsibility" of the Community Church was pointed out in a bulletin issued yesterday by the campaign committee which has charge of the canvass to raise Tls. 65,000 for the first unit of the new church to be erected in Frenchtown. The campaign will begin next Friday and will last for one week. Headquarters have been established in the Ben Building 25A Avenue Edward VII. During the canvass the team members will take tiffin at the Hotel Parisien.

The four groups to which the Community Church feels a definite responsibility are the business men of Shanghai, the missionaries, the children of the American school, and the transients and sailors. Regarding this cosmopolitan congregation, the campaign bulletin says:

"To the large business element: Shanghai presents many temptations which make it difficult for young business men and their families to follow those principles which have guided their conduct in the United States or in other countries. The church should be the center of their social life and the source of inspiration and strength. Community Church has been ministering to a large group of business people, one-half of the present membership coming from this group.

"To the missionary group: One-half of the membership of the church comes from the large missionary body stationed in this city. In Community Church missionaries find services conducted in their own language. It is a source of inspiration to them. Their hearts must be kept warm for the tasks which are theirs. Many missionaries from the interior find it necessary to come and go through Shanghai. At Community Church, for the first time perhaps for months, they have the opportunity of attending services in English.

"To the children of the American School: An unusually fine type of youth is to be found in this school, and Community Church has a special responsibility to them. There are now about 340 enrolled in the school. The new school will accommodate 500 in 1927, and plans call for the ultimate accommodation of 1,000. The church development must parallel that of the school.

"To the transients and sailors: Shanghai is one of the crossroads of the world. The passengers from the ships often are to be found at the services. World travellers, business men, and others in Shanghai for a few weeks, attend Community Church. Usually there are war vessels in port, and sailor boys are to be found at nearly every Sunday afternoon service."

All of these four elements are represented directly or indirectly on the campaign advisory committee which is composed of the following: Dr. J. B. Fearn, chairman; Rev. C. M. Drury executive secretary; A. Q. Adamson, W. W. Bartlett, J. H. Black, C. L. Boynton, E. S. Cunningham, J. H. Dollar, Dr. T. B. Dunn, W. H. Lacy, Judge C. S. Lobingier, W. W. Lockwood, Dr. J. C. McCracken, C. W. Petitt, F. J. Raven and G. G. Strobe.

Thousand March In Church Parade

Hangchow, June 2.—The Sunday School Union of this city staged the biggest event of the year here today when they conducted a parade of more than a thousand Sunday School children. There was first an assemtly of the children in the auditorium of the Y. ... C. A. and from there they marched through the streets of the modern part of the city to the public recreation grounds where they indulged in a combination track meet and picnic. While those thousand children, equalling in numbers the entire Christian community of the city, were marching through the streets, carring at the front a banner announcing that they were members of the Sunday schools of the city, tens of thousands more lined the streets and followed them along the way to see what it was all about.

As they marched the children were singing Onward Christian Soldiers to the accompaniment of a cornet played by a returned student from America, and the whole parade and picnic was under the leadership of another returned student. It was altogether a significent event in life of the city and shows that the church is not neglecting her second line of defence.

Another recent event of interest and value to the Christian workers of the city and to about forty delegates from other cities in the province was a social service institute conducted under the auspices of the Hangchow Union Committee by the Yangtsepoo Social Center of Shanghai. The instructors were Prof. Daniel H. Kulp II and Mr. Dzien Dzen Ya. The lectures were given in the forenoons and the afternoons were devided to informal discussion. The following subjects were given in the institute.

1.—Social Works; History, Nature, and Function.
2.—Human Nature: Biological Heredity and Original Equipment.
3.—Human Nature: Developement of Personality.
4.—Social Groups: Manner of Formation and Function.
5.—Social Case Work and the Case Record.
6.—Social Investigation.
7.—The Social Survey.

Shanghai Again Defeats Navy, 19-0

The Shanghai baseball team defeated the sailors again Sunday, this time by the largest margin yet, the final count being 19 to 0. The game was a farce as the sailors made little effort to keep the score down after the locals had acquired a six run start in the first inning. Wynn pitched for Shanghai and seemed to be something like his old self.

As a curtain raiser Sunday the sailors played the M..... nine, and managed to defeat them. It was about the only game they have won since their arrival in port. The score was 8 to 5.

Following is the box score of the Shanghai-Navy game:

situation and each emphasised the necessity of an early release for the eight foreigners still in the bandits's hands. Both of the Shanghai lads wore four weeks' growth of beard when they landed here and were wearing practically the same weird collection of garments which they had accumulated during their imprisonment. Mr. Saphiere appeared to be suffering from a bad foot and had to use a stick in walking. He is at present confined to his bed and Mr. Elias, also, is suffering from the strain of his experience.

According to Mr. Verea those remaining in the hands of the Lincheng brigands are in reasonably good health. Chev. Musso, during the last few days of Mr. Verea's imprisonment, was showing signs of improvement and all hoped to be freed within a few days. The departure of the last batch of released men, however, was a sad scene, Mr. Verea said. Those departing wished those remaining the best of luck and an early release. And those remaining wished their more fortunate friends a speedy reunion with their loved ones and expressed, the hope of seeing them again soon. The feeling of those left behind was fully relised by those departing, Mr. Verea attested—for he and his three comrades bound for freedom had experienced the same sentiments when Mr. Smith and Major Allen went homeward from Paotzuku.

"NEVER AGAIN"

"Not again for half a million," declared Mr. Verea yesterday. "I have been in Mexico when the bandits there were rife and have had experience with them, but with the Chinese bandit I have no inclination to form a closer acquaintance. For the first two weeks Mrs. Verea and I were kept isolated from the rest of the captives. We had no inkling of what was going on. We did not know if at the next moment we might be taken out and shot. We had little food and less water. No one that we might speak a word to. It was living on the verge of death, with the knowledge that it was the verge."

Mr. Verea, who joined Mrs. Verea here and is staying with Mr. G. D. Woodyard, 16 Tracy Terrace, says he doesn't think he will continue his "pleasure trip" through China. He was fascinated by the country until the Blue Express was derailed and he and his bride were driven into the wilderness before the bayonets of bandit rifles. Henceforth he is willing to take his chances with the bandits of other nations, and his plans for a tour of China cities have been abandoned.

"China," says he, "has lost its charm for me with this incident."

And the concensus of opinion of all the released prisoners who arrived yesterday supports his dictum.

Russian Is Jailed For Impersonation Of A Police Officer

The theft of 237 coppers, equivalent to about $1.30 big money, earned Nicolas Fasamiskiff, unemployed Russian, 14 days' accommodation at the Municipal Bastille by way of a judgment in the Mixed Court yesterday.

Detective Sergeant Schmidt, of Hongkew, testified to the effect that on Saturday evening the accused approached Sikh police constable No. 273 and told him that gambling was going on in an alleyway off Dixwell Road. The Sikh accompanied the informer to the spot and found a man dispensing money to a gathering. The Russian, who had meanwhile displayed a police baton and convinced the Indian that he was a detective, called upon the dispenser to place his funds in his (the Russian's) hat and then walked rapidly away. The Sikh then became suspicious and apprehended the foreigner.

As it turned out, the coppers were being distributed by the foreman of a handcart gang and the Court refused to accept the defendant's tale about being convinced that it was a gambling episode and sent him to Ward Road for the fortnight.

S. A. S. Graduating Class Hears Eloquent Address

"The Revelation of Saint John the Divine." The Revised Version calls it: "The Revelation of John". Evidently the scholars who brought forth this new translation realised that the word saint was a relic of mediavelism and so omitted it. However the title is in direct contradiction to the first verse for there we read: "The revelation of Jesus Christ which God gave him to show unto his servants." The very first word in the Greek text is 'apokaluptis' and literally it means to take off the cover, to unveil. The title is not inspire—the text is! 'Apokaluptis Jesus Xristos' or 'The unveiling of Jesus Christ.'

The whole book is dedicated to this purpose. In the first chapter we see the unveiling of His personal glory. The chapter is colored with all of the symbolism and mysticism of the East.

The second and third chapters reveal Jesus as Lord and it is with these two chapters that I desire to confine my remarks today. With infinite grace, we see our Saviour presiding over the seven churches. He is ruling, judging, condemning, welding all seven into one.

We read the seven messages to the seven churches, Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamum, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea. There are three things which are common to all seven messages. In each letter our Christ is revealed as saying "I know", "I will" and "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith."

'Apokaluptis Jesus Xristos'. The unveiling of Jesus Christ! "To the angel in the Church of Ephesus write—I KNOW thy works and thy toil and patience." I know thy works! The Greek word for works means all of life. It is the expression of character which is found in conduct. "I know your works" said the Christ.

To Smyrna, He says: "I know thy tribulation and thy poverty." The Christ who is speaking is familiar with the rough friars through which faith must struggle and this familiarity with discouragements is put forth as an encouragement. "I know!"

Pergamum was the capital of a province and in that city there was a temple erected and dedicated to the emperor. The early Christians came into contact with the government because they refused to worship the emperor and this gave rise to the early persecutions. To the church in Pergamum the Christ said: "I know where thou dwellest, even where Satan's throne is and thou holdest fast my name, and didst not deny my faith." "I know thy faithfulness."

The longest message goes to the city of seemingly the least importance—Thyatire. "I know thy works and thy love and faith and patience."

Next comes Sardis which was once the home of Croesus whose wealth has become proverbial. The sin there was that which always follows extreme luxury. "I know thy works that thou hast a name that thou livest, and thou art dead."

To the church at Philadelphia: "I know thy works..that thou hadst a little power and didst keep my word and didst not deny my name." As in the case of Smyrna there is no reproach.

And finally there is Laodicea.. lukewarm Laodicea. "I know thy works that thou art neither hot nor cold." Better is it for a person to be cold and thus at least conscious of his need of the Sun of Righteousness, than to be basking in that comparative warmth which brings a lazy contentment.

What a searching seven fold declaration of knowledge "I know!"

God knows. The Psalmist marvelled at the works of God and said: "He counteth the number of the stars; He calleth them all by their name." "He understandest my thoughts afar off." Christ in the days of His flesh said: "The very hairs of your head are all numbered." He knows!

The first unveiling, in these two chapters, is the unveiling of the omniscience of God.

A second curtain is pulled back when we heard the words "I will" and we see Christ as the Sovereign—the ruling King.

"Ephesus—I will come to thee and remove thy candlestick out of its place except thou repent." It is an ancient custom of the East that remains until this day to keep the candlestick burning in the house both day and night. So universal was this custom that the prosperity of either the individual or the family was expressed by the ever burning lamp. In Proverbs we read: "The lamp of the wicked shall be put out." Notice the significance of the threat then: "I will remove thy candlestick." The wages of sin is death.

"Smyrna—Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee the crown of life." Smyrna was the only one of the seven cities which survived until modern times. The world was recently moved upon hearing of the atrocities committed there by the Turk. People turned and read this passage again, and remembered the faithful Christians in Symrna. It was one of the two cities—the other was Philadelphia, which received unreserved praise. "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee the crown of life."

"Pergamum—why hast thou received the Nicolaitans, those false teachers who delude you by their smooth words and lead you away from the gospel" "Repent, or else I come to thee quickly and I will make war against them."

"Thyatira—remember—He that overcometh, will I give authority over the nations."

"Sardis—If therefore thou shalt not watch, I will come as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee——I will in no wise blot out the name of him that overcometh, I will confess his name." The parallelism to passages in Matthew is unmistakable. The same Christ is speaking.

"Philadelphia you can stand with Smyrna" "He that overcometh I will make him a pillar in the temple of my God."

Laodicea—thou who art lukewarm, unto thee is given the most precious exhortation that is found anywhere in the Bible" "If any man hear my voice and open the door, I Will come in to him and Will sup with him and he with me."

What a wonderful collection of "I wills"

And now we draw the third curtain. First our Saviour is revealed as the omniscient one. He knows. Secondly we have Him revealed as the ruling one. He wills. Finally He is revealed as the counsellor. To all seven churches goes the message: "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches." They have been listening to too many other voices—now, listen to what the Spirit saith.

It is a mistake to believe that the principles involved in these messages to the seven churches can be applied only to those seven churches. There is an individual application that we can make to ourselves.

God knows! Think what a transforming power it would be in our own lives if we actually believed all the time that God knows. When tempted to sin we would be held back by the realisation that God knows. Stirred by the belief that God knows we would come far more often to the throne of grace.

God knows! Think what an uplifting and strengthening force that would be to us if always we believed that our God knows it all. He knows our toil, our tribulation, our poverty, where we dwell in the midst of temptation, our words, our love, our faith, our ministry, our reputation and our works. All of these are mentioned in the letters to the seven churches. God knows our tears, our heartaches, our hopes and our dreams.

As young people you are just facing a most interesting part of your life—your college days. You have some wonderful experiences before you. In some ways your experience will differ from that of the ordinary college student. For years, perhaps, you will be separated from your parents and from your friends here in China. At times you may get homesick for China. At times you will get blue and discouraged. You will meet with insidious temptations which will severely test your Christian principles. You will wonder if it is all worth while. At those times you will want somebody who understands. The lonely heart cries out for such a friend.

God knows—our Saviour knows it all. What a wonderful comfort it is to know that He does not judge from outward appearances but can read the thoughts and intents of the heart.

God rules. God is sovereign. Scepticism and pessimism have finished their incidious work when they bring any individual to the point where he believes that the world is but the result of fortuitous chance. The great unveiling of Jesus Christ in Revelation is the unveiling of our Saviour seated upon the throne. God rules!

"Unless you repent I will remove the candlestick." "If thou art faithful I will give thee the crown of life." "If you will open the door of your heart I will come in and I will sup with thee." Wonderful promises! Gracious words of exhortation!

Don't loose your optimism. Don't let your efforts make this world a better place to live in be weakened by any idea that righteousness is powerless before unrighteousness. The history of Christian thought tells the story of multitudes who abandoned all hope in the ultimate victorious reign of righteousness.

Whenever I read or hear of this attitude I remember an incident in the book "Notre Dame" by Victor Hugo. If you have read it perhaps you will remember the opening scene in the great hall. The people were waiting for the Cardinal to come. They waited and waited and finally they began to be impatient—and especially the students. The author points out two figures in that crowd. They are the licensed copyist and the King's furrier. The copyist is speaking to the furrier: "I tell you sir, this is the end of the world. The students never were so riotous before. It's the cursed inventions of the age that are ruining us all—artillery, bombards, and particularly printing, that other German pest. No more manuscripts, no more books! Printing is the death to bookselling. The end of the world is at hand." "So I see by the rage for velvet stuffs" said the furrier.

God rules! The introduction of the art of printing and the rage for velvet stuffs may discourage the copyist and the furrier, but still God rules! The time will come when every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess Jesus as Lord and you are to have an important part in the bringing of that day.

Many voices will ask for your ear. Many there are who would lead you astray with fair promises of happiness and wealth. "But he that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith."

"He that hath an ear!" Why are those words put there? Why doesn't the text say: "Listen to what the Spirit saith?" I looked up the first phrase in my concordance and was surprised to learn how many times that phrase fell from our Master's lips: "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." Evidently Jesus was referring to some organ of hearing that was more keenly attuned to catch, not the combinations of sounds which make up the words, but the meaning of the words; the principles involved. Paul tells us practically the same thing when he says that "spiritual things are spiritually discerned." The things of God are sometimes hidden from those who are hardened in sin and revealed only to those who are able to receive.

Iowa has but few lakes. The biggest of all is known as Lake Okobijoi and was formed by the terminal moraines of a great glacier that swept down over that part of the country. The contour of the whole country about the lakes tells us of the work of the glacier. On the north side of the lake running for five or six miles across the prairie there is a peculiar shaped hill. Looked at from the sky, one might say that it resembled a hugh snake. It was about forty feet high, and about one hundred and twenty feet wide at the base. What does that hill mean? What doest it tell?

The Indians never read its secret. The early pioneer never guessed its story. Today the pleasure seeker, tramps over it, holes picnics on its grassy sides, but never dreams of its history. The geologist comes and digs into it. He finds sand and gravel neatly arranged in layers and he tells us that it was formed by water action. Long ago the glacier was there. The sun grew warmer and the glacier began to melt. Through walls of ice ran a river which carried the sand and gravel which was released by the melting ice. The load became too heavy and gradually the river deposited its burden and built up for itself a river bed. The ice melted away. The river stopped flowing and today we have the river bed remaining. That which was hidden from the Indian, the pioneer, and the pleasure seeker is revealed unto the geologist. Truly there is deep wisdom in that phrase "He that hath an ear let him hear."

God knows! God wills! God speaks! Keep the ears of your soul attuned to hear His voice. 'He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith" Perplexing times will come. Important decisions will have to be made. You will need heavenly advice.

F. W. Boreham has entitled one of his delightful and thought inspiring essays: "Violets and Vipers." He opens his essay with these words: "There is do doubt about it, we are living in a higgedly-piggedly world." The groceryman keeps his spices separate. The chemist is very careful not to mix up his chemicals. The lawyer has his pigeon holes for his various papers, and the housewife has cupboards and drawers for her various dishes and linens.

But not so with nature. The flowers grow in a mixed confusion on the roadside. The forest is filled with the giant tree and the little shrub: matted thickets and climbing vines—all mixed together in a profuse extravagance.

Boreham quotes from Richard Jeffries the naturalist who says that vipers have their favorite habitats and it is in the violet bed! Nature doesn't sort and separate. Nature doesn't put violets in one compartment and vipers in another. Violets and vipers are all mixed together, so much so, that F. W. Boreham is lead to exclaim that after all this is a higgedly-piggedly world.

Life itself is made up of a strange mixtures of violets and vipers. And we are called upon to choose. It is harder to choose between the better and the best than between the good and the bad. Salvation is dependent upon choosing the violets out of life and leaving the vipers.

Take love—for instance. What kind of a world would we have, if we didn't have love. It forms the basis for most of our literature. Our songs are filled with its spirit. Our homes are built upon its reality. Love is the power which keeps the machinery of the world going.

Men have been changed by a woman's love and women have been changed by a man's love. Love purifies, sanctifies, and glorifies. Search the Paradises of the world and you do not find so beautiful a flower garden as this flower garden of love violets.

And yet "the vipers of lust lurk amid the violets of love." Many a person who has bent over to pick a violet has heard the rustle of dead leaves; has seen the tail of a snake being drawn under the very leaves of the plant that offers the flower; and has felt the poisonous fangs of the viper.

Youth is before you with its romances, latent with tremendous possibilities for good or for evil. "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith." God knows your problems and your temptations. He knows where the vipers are. He will strengthen and help you to overcome. Listen to that voice.

This is your last Sunday here with us as a class. We are going to miss you. As you go, our prayers will go with you. We shall watch with interest your activities. God, forbid that you should ever allow any veil of doubt to come between you and the Christ. May you always realize that He is the knowing one; that He is the ruling one; and that He speaks to the soul which listens.

May God's blessings go with you.

WHEN YOUR CHILD HAS A COLD

He Needs Baby's Own Tablets

When the first symptoms of a cold are noticed give the child a warm bath and dry carefully; reduce the quantity of food a little, and give Baby's Own Tablets to gently move the bowels; grease the nose inside and out with pure vaseline.

"I always feel safe when I have Baby's Own Tablets in the house, and have given them to my baby for two years whenever she needed them. I find that they quickly break up a cold, keep her bowels in good condition and make her sleep well," writes Mrs. H. E. Newman, 294 Fifth Street, South Brooklyn, New York.

No home where there are infants and young children should be without Baby's Own Tablets, the Canadian remedy for infantile indigestion, constipation, colic, diarrhoea, croup, colds, teething troubles and worms. Of dealers, or post free, 60 cents the vial ($3 for 6) from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 60 Kiangse Road, Shanghai.

Give Merchants Credit For Keeping Prices Down

Most Manufacturers Also Striving To Prevent Harmful Price Boosting—Labor, Too, Acting Most Reasonably—Conditions Stabilized

BY B. C. FORBES

Unto every man his due. Retailers were branded as the blackest sheep of all when price boosting became crazily rampant during the war boom and just before the "buyers' strike" set in.

The inevitable governmental investigation was started—too late, of course—but nothing was found out to justify any action whatsoever against any retailer.

This time you haven't heard—at least, I haven't heard—a word about profiteering by retail merchants.

The truth appears to be that retailers have thrown in their influence on the opposite side and have had a restraining effect on the upward trend of prices.

All of us are wiser in 1923 than we were in 1919-1920. We haven't forgotten the painful lesson we then learned. We realise that we cannot continue to enjoy golden eggs if we kill the goose that was laying them.

Frankly, it did look for a time in the first quarter of this year as if the boom in activity and in prices would inescapably bring on premature disaster. The pace was becoming altogether too swift.

Happily, however, the danger became widely recognised, and since then moderation has largely taken the place of inflation and unrestrained speculation.

Read these sentences from a letter written, not to me, but to one of my friends, by the president of a State Retail Clothiers' Association, and not intended for publication:

"It occurs to me that if the facts as to what the legitimate manufacturer and retailer is trying to do to protect the public were laid before our public it would prevent the recurrence of what happened two years ago.

"Just for your information, in the face of all the advances that have been made in the woolen market, Hart Schaffner and Marx opened their line this Fall with an advance of only six percent over their amount for Spring, and the John B. Stetson Company have not changed their prices for this Fall. This seems to be the way all the large manufacturers are endeavoring to co-operate in meeting the situation. They have done much to prevent these 'sharpshooters' who are in the business today from taking advantage of the conditions that exist.

"We, on our part, have laid our plans to sell our merchandise at as small a margin of profit as is possible this Fall—even smaller than last year.

"We have a National Association of Retail Clothiers with over 6,000 members, and they are all being advised to work along these lines.

Now, it does seem to me that when merchants are trying to conduct their business on a legitimate basis, they should not be made to suffer as they have in the past.

"After all is said and done, regardless of whether there is any reason for the advance in the price of raw materials, the fact remains that the retailer is the last one who comes in contact with the public. He must pay the manufacturer whatever his prices are and sell his merchandise on that basis. And, as I have said before, all legitimate clothing stores throughout the United States who are members of this association are being advised to take as small a profit as they consistently can in order to avoid a buyers' strike.

"As President of the Retail Clothiers' Association, my message to its members will be to adopt this policy for Fall."

The clear conception by manufacturers, merchants, bankers, etc., of the desirability of keeping prices within reasonable limits is the most gratifying feature of the whole business outlook today.

I have discussed this subject with the heads of many large concerns and in every case the attitude expressed has been sound. I attended the convention of the leading bankers in the country now being held at Rye, N. Y., by the American Bankers' Association, and my talks with them left no room for doubt as to the thorough grasp they have of what the situation calls for.

"Talk is cheap," you say?

But the actual developments are equally impressive. The price level, the best records indicate, has not advanced at all during April. Price declines have been more numerous than advances, and the net change for the whole month is likely to be extremely slight in either direction.

This is really a most remarkable and a most gratifying showing.

The conduct of labor has also been unusually sensible.

Wage advances of ten percent or a little more have been quite common and doubtless will become practically general. This is entirely in harmony with the rise which has taken place in the cost of living.

Nothing is now in sight to foster alarm that labor intends to act unreasonably or recklessly in this important matter of wage demands.

Much comfort can be drawn from this phase of the nation's business prospects.

That rational profits and reasonable wages make for sustained general prosperity is better understood today than ever before.

This being so, our present prosperity ought to last very much longer than appeared possible some weeks ago, when indications of recklessness and inflation were becoming disquietingly numerous.

They Say—

Judge Jacob Panken, prominent New York Socialist—"Two-thirds of the people of this city have to use streets which are often in a disgraceful condition. Many a time I have walked ankledeep in mud and debris. Such conditions are disease-producing. We should determine to keep our streets clean. An adequate streetcleaning force could do it, just as an adequate subway system would abolish subway horrors that have become our daily portion. I think that the New York subways have broken down both as to service and finance. The overcowding on the subways, which is the common experience of all of us, is some day going to produce a bad smash. I wonder that no one has yet brought suit against a subway company for assault by his fellow passengers! We need a different kind of reformer these days. The old kind means well, but doesn't do much except talk."

Mrs. John van Shaick Bloodgood (formerly Lida L. Fleitmann), noted horsewoman and social leader—"No one can be happy without some all-absorbing interest. Mine is horses and dogs; but there isn't an animal I don't love. The possession of any number of high-powered motor cars isn't in it with owning one good horse. The greatest pleasure I allow myself is winning a coveted prize with a horse or dog. I am as happy for the animal's success, which of course is always the result of strenuous preparations, as for my own. A good animal must have the spirit of co-operation—yes, animals have often as much intelligence as we—to help his owner to success. Love for animals should be inherent in every woman's breast, just as love for children and sympathy for all appealing things. As a nation we do not do enough in the behalf of our dumb friends."

Dr. Adolf Lorenz, worldfamous surgeon—"We are hearing much nowadays about adrenalin. The quality that makes some men ready for a fight or a frolic is due to the "glands of combat," the adrenals. Once thought to be merely little lumps of fat, they were later found to take a very important part in the play of life forces. The active principle, or hormone, of this gland is adrenalin. It is thrown into your blood in a steady stream when the sensation of fear comes. Nature thus makes an effort to flood your body with the chemical basis of courage. The coward, then, may be merely a person deficient in a reserve stock of this valuable substance of which valor is made. We know certain men who are always ready to fling themselves into a slugging match, even before the chip is knocked off their shoulders. Now we know the adrenal glands are responsible for this spirit."

Secretary of State Hughes—"The proper direction of our material and spiritual forces will gain for all the American republics the enhanced prosperity which waits on the friendly collaboration of States secure in their recognized equality, in their mutual respect, and in the supremacy of the common sentiment of justice. Charles R. Hughes. The Pan-American conference aids in this way. Our intimate economic relations require many advantageous adjustments which our fortunate relations make possible. It is no prejudice to other interests wisely to conserve our own. We seek not only to buttress the foundations of amity, but to take full advantage of its opportunities. The essence of Pan-Americanism is the sentiment of mutually beneficial co-operation, each republic appropriately safeguarding its sovereignty and independence in a distinct community of interest."

Senora Juan Antonio Buero, wife of former Minister of Foreign Affairs of Uruguay—"Conditions that are fast making divorce a menace to the stability of the family life in America fortunately do not exist in Uruguay. Divorce is frowned upon in my country so that it amounts to social ostracism to those who resort to the courts for divorce. I think this is due principally to the training young people receive. Boys and girls are brought up to consider carefully the importance of permanency in the married state and the serious character of matrimony. Divorce in Uruguay is almost negligible. Family life is happy and is the ideal state aspired to by both men and women. It is so unfashionable to be delinquent in the keeping of one's marriage vows that immorality is not a grave problem for us to face."

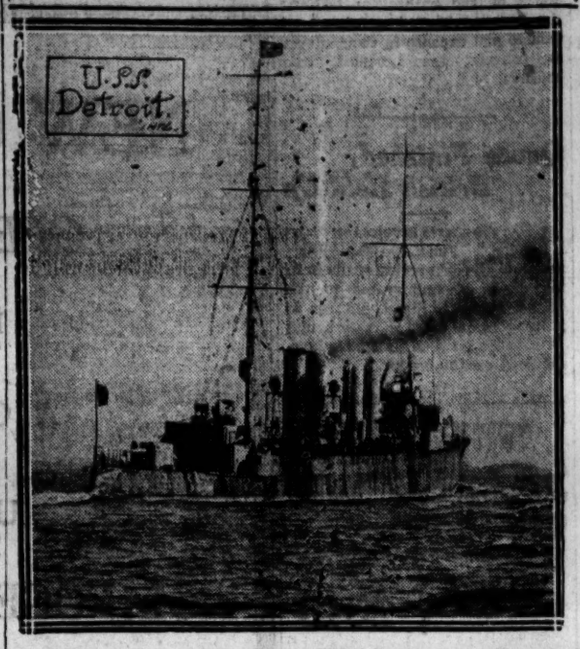
Former Judge Leonard A. Snitkin—"The development of medical science makes capital punishment seem more and more of an anachronism. Out of every hundred committals for murder in England there result about forty-nine convictions. Of these, about fourteen on an average, are insane. I believe this is practically true also in the United States. There can be little doubt that many have been executed who were not responsible for their actions. The whole question of moral responsibility is surrounded with so much doubt and difficulty as to furnish one more strong argument against taking an irrevocable step. Viewing the murderer as a bad man and one who is in danger of spreading contamination, it would be necessary to keep him by himself. The effectual way of accomplishing this is the construction of prisons in each State for murderers and the placing of them in charge of special disciplinarians who have ample Powers to carry out the strictest letter of the law."

Fast New Cruiser For U. S. Navy



THE U. S. S. Detroit is shown on her trial spin, after leaving the Fore River yard of the Bethlehem Ship Building Corporation. This scout cruiser, which will log 35 knots, is one of ten nearing completion. It is 552 feet long and has 90,000 rated horsepower, but is capable of raising 105,000. It has quadruple propellers and metal rigging, entirely insulated from the deck to facilitate radio communication.

Zam-Buk

The secret of Zam-Buk's outstanding power and reliability in treatment of skin diseases and injuries lies in its unique herbal character. Zam-Buk is Nature's own product and not an artificial substitute of the chemist's laboratory. Zam-Buk provides the ideal substance provided by Mother Nature in response to the instinct of man to rub his hurts. Zam-Buk is compounded from rare and costly herbs gathered together from different parts of the world. The saps and juices extracted from these herbs are scientifically refined and united in certain exact proportions as ascertained by experience. Zam-Buk is absolutely unique in its healing, antiseptic and germicidal properties, and it is a medicinal product specially prepared for use in hot climates. So highly refined and penetrative is Zam-Buk that it carries its healing and purifying influence into tissues far below the surface skin, where ordinary fatty skin dressings never reach. Eczema, ringworm, ulcers, poisoned wounds, scalp diseases; all yield rapidly to the soothing curative action of Zam-Buk. It grows new skin in a wonderful way and is invaluable for swift healing of burns, scalds, cuts, insect bites and stings, etc. Also good for piles, and for sprains, stiffness, rheumatic and muscular pains.

HEALING

ZAM-BUK is obtainable of chemists and medicine dealers everywhere or direct from agents, Messrs. Wakefield and Co., 60 Kiangse Road, Shanghai

Tells Of Additions To Royal Asiatic Museum

The following interesting account of the past year's work and acquisitions was given by Dr. C. Noel Davis, honorary curator of the Royal Asiatic Society's museum at the annual meeting held last week:

The past year was full of interest in the museum, and a number of additions were made by collection, purchase, loans and gifts.

Mr. A. de C. Sowerby continued to give his highly valued and distinguished services, and it is gratifying to know that he has consented to fill the office of joint honorary curator of the museum during the coming year.

BIG FISH PRESENTED

The achievements of the year here recounted, are almost entirely due to his enthusiastic and unsparing labor.

One of the most interesting exhibits at present is a magnificent specimen of the Giant Japanese Crab (Macrocheira Kaempferi) which was kindly placed on loan by Mr. H. H. Read.

The greatest span between the large claws of this huge creature is 10 feet 3 inches.

The length of the body from the tip of the rostrum, to the posterior margin of the carapace 14½ inches; and the width of the carapace 11¼ inches.

Two large specimens of fish presented by Mr. G. H. Parkes were mounted and put on exhibition. One of these, Ctenopharyngodoa idellal, popularly called the Chinese ide, makes a very handsome exhibit. Both these specimens the second being a large Chinese bream, (Brabramis Pekineusis) were caught in the pond of the Hongkew Park. Several other sportsmen have presented specimens of fish to the museum, all of which were taken with the fly in waters near Hangchow. Foremost amongst these are some very fine specimens of one of the so-called rainbow carps, (obsaruchthus Bidens. It was requested that these might be put on exhibition, and this will be done, when more room is available in the museum.

Mr. Sowerby placed on loan a number of skulls of memmals, namely, bears and deer, while several skulls of various animals which were found stored away in one of the cupboards were cleaned and placed on exhibition. Old and moth-eaten heads of wild boars, a lion and some deer had their skins removed and the skulls cleaned, and these, with the other skulls already mentioned, will be useful for purposes of comparison.

EGYPTIAN RELICS

Mr. Peter J. Bahr very kindly lent a small collection of ancient Egyptian relics as he felt that since so much interest had been aroused by the recent discoveries in Egypt, connected with the Tomb of King Tutankhamen, these would give the public a clearer understanding of the subject.

During the year a large and representative collection of local fish, both fresh-water and marine, was made. Mr. Sowerby's own collector worked with the native museum assistant so that duplicate specimens of all these are being sent to the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, which Mr. Sowerby represents in China. There they will be identified and the names sent back to China. The native assistant has also collected local insects, mainly of the orders (Coleoptera Lepidopters and Neuroptera).

A pair of Burmese Peacocks and a specimen of the North China (Koplass) or Pucras Pheasant, (Pucradia darwini) were purchased while a specimen of the large fire-backed Pheasants of Thibet and two male Indian Koels (Eudynamis honorata) were mounted and place on view. A specimen of a Kangaroo was also purchased.

LECTURES GIVEN

Lectures in Natural History were given to the boys of the Shanghai Public School and the Thomas Hanbury School.

The increased interest in natural history in Shanghai is shown by the number of reptiles, mostly snakes, that were sent to the museum by residents. European visitors during the year were fairly numerous, and it is certain that greater interest still would be shown if there were more exhibits. The museum is much congested and there is no room at present either for the proper storage of reserve collections or the exhibition of all the different types of animals now contained in the museum. Something should be done in the near future to relieve this congestion and possibly, by careful arrangement, additional wall-cases could be put in for the exhibition of more specimens. Cases a foot deep, and 8 or 10 feet high could be placed round the Lecture Hal without unduly encroaching on the space available for audiences at lectures. Similar cases might be placed in the Entrance Hall where at present only a couple of maps are on view. The small room below the collectors' room, now used as a sleeping place for the Society's native staff, might be turned into a storage room for reserve collections, especially those preserved in formalin or alcohol. Quarters might possibly be found for the native staff outside the premises of the Society.

It is also advisable to find storage room for the large quantity of back numbers of the R.A.S. Journal, at present unsuitably stored on the top of the cases in the Bird-room. Even the space now available in the two large rooms might be used to better advantage by a re-arrangement and addition of cases, which would relieve congestion and bring about a more effective display of specimens.

Titled British Woman Wins Writing Fame

Lady Jean O. Grant

LADY Jean Ogilvie Grant, daughter of the Earl of Sheffield, is winning considerable reputation as a writer of fairy tales.

Re-enrolled Bandits Causing Alarm

Nanchang, May 30.—The Honan bandits who have been drafted into the national army are bivouacked across the river from Nanchang. They are housed in godown, freight cars, tents and boats, and every morning drill masters treat them to a vigorous course in the goose step.

At present they are demanding six months' pay, and by way of capitulation the Military Government has offered them two months. It is obviously desirable that this dispute be settled as soon as possible in order to hasten the embarkation of the troops for their destination, which is rumored to be Kanchow.

When the last sail has rounded the bend in the river, the city fathers together with the populace will give a sigh of relief, for these visitors have all the characteristices of their last year's reputation.

Recently by way of diversion, or more probably through "reversion to type" four of these braves robbed a mail carrier of his load, and the next morning they were promptly put into prison by order of the Military Governor. It is to the credit of the authorities in Nanchang that they have spared no trouble and expense in their efforts to convert these bandit into soldiers.

Quota Finished, British Held Up

(Reuter's Service)

Exchange Fluctuations

Asia Banking Corporation

June 4, 1923

Spot and forward bar silver were each unchanged in London on Saturday. The New York price was also unchanged and the London-New York cross rate declined to 463. Our official quotations here today were unchanged from Saturday and our market while being fairly steady in the early part of the morning eased off considerably during the day.

The highest rates at which business in Sterling was done were 3-1⅝ for June delivery, 3-1½ for July and 3-1⅜ for August. The highest in Gold Dollars were 72⅝ for near delevery and 72½ for forward.

In the afternoon however, speculators were strong buyers and the market quickly cashed off closing weak with no sellers of Sterling at better than 3-1¼ for June delivery, 3-1⅛ for July and 3-1 1-16 for August.

The best sellers of Gold Dollars were offering 72⅛ for near delivery and 72 for forward. There were sellers of Yen at 68½ and buyers at 63⅜.

In the afternoon banks were quoting 3-2, 73⅜ and 1145 for sterling, Gold Dollar and Franc bills respectively.

India bought silver in London on Satur day and the market is reported as closing steady. New York also report their market as steady.

AMERICAN MAIL DUE TO-MORROW ON THE PIERCE

Following the sailing of the Empress of Canada last, night two more mails will be despatched this week. They are to go on the President McKinley tomorrow, and the President Cleveland next Saturday.

The McKinley which is coming from Hongkong, will dock at the China Merchants Central Wharf about 3 o'clock this afternoon, and is to sail for Seattle via Japan ports at the same hour tomorrow. The Cleveland is expected in Shanghai from Hongkong Friday afternoon, and will sail from the Central Wharf for San Francisco via Japan ports and Honolulu on Saturday.

Bringing mail from the States, the President Pierce is due here from San Francisco, Honolulu, Yokohama and Kobe late tomorrow afternoon, and is to dock at the China Merchants Central Wharf. The vessel has on board 421 sacks of mail, a full passenger list and 2,500 tons of cargo for Shanghai, and will sail for Hongkong and Manila on Friday morning.

Mail from Europe will arrive on the P. and O. steamer Devanha this morning. The vessel left Hongkong at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and is to dock at the Shanghai and Hongkew Wharf upon arrival.

Two mail boats will sail for Europe this week-end. They are the Cordillere, for Marseilles on Friday, and the Sardinia, for London on Saturday.

The Cordillere will be despatched from its berth Friday evening, and the tender with outgoing passengers is to leave the French Mail jetty at 3 p.m. Heavy baggage should be delivered to the Company's office before Thursday noon, and mail will close at 1 and 2 p.m. Friday for registered and ordinary matter.

The P. and O. steamer Nankin which left Shanghai on April 14, arrived in London at 5 p.m. May 29. The Sicilia of the same line left Bombay for Shanghai via ports on May 31 at noon.

How The New York Times Viewed It—A Warning To China

(From The New York Times, May 9)

IT is the scale and audacity of the latest piece of Chinese banditry which make it serious. Never before have so many foreigners been kidnapped at one stroke in such a startling manner. Individuals have been seized, of course, and held for ransom; whole trains have been robbed in the approved Jesse James style; but this is the first time that a fast express has been stopped and foreigners forcibly removed from it. The bandits are not like our highwaymen. They are not merely a few desperate characters. They are unpaid soldiers, organised in bands, with a certain amount of military discipline, bent on obtaining loot with which to recompense themselves for the profitless months which they spent in the military forces of a Chinese Provincial Governor.

The outrage is, therefore, primarily an indication of the lack of political cohesion and order to which China has been reduced. Although the Peking Government is recognised by the world Powers, the actual control of the country is in the hands of the Tuchuns, or Military Governors of the various provinces. They recognise no allegiance to a central government. The hostility between the North and South is still strong, and President Li, who was reinstated by General Wu Pei-fu last Summer following the defeat of the Manchurian war lord Chang Tso-lin, and who presides over the Central Government in Peking, is virtually powerless. The revenues from the taxes, which are regularly paid and which should go to the Central Government, are, as a matter of fact, for the most part collected by the Provincial Governors and are used for their own affairs, while the Peking Government is unable to pay its bills.

This weakness of the Pekine Government is one of the difficulties in the way of obtaining the release of the kipnapped foreigners. Its authority over the Province of Shantung is slight, and it has no large forces at its disposal. The fact however, that the Military Governor of Shantung has lost caste through this sensational piece of banditry within his territory will doubtless lead him to lend all his power to the chase. The trouble comes in making the bandits turn over their prisoners uninjured. To surround them, is easy enough. But if the bandits resort to extreme measures and expose their prisoners to death, a difficult situation may well arise.

To the credit of the Peking Government be it said that it is doing its utmost to obtain the release of the prisoners. The fact that British and Italian as well as American subjects are among the kidnapped has increased the likelihood of the incident assuming a grave international character for China. This President Li well knows. It is the supineness of China rather than the unwillingness of any Chinese Government to comply with the diplomats' demand which is liable to make future difficulties.

Diabetes, Dreaded Disease, Yields To New Gland Cure

BY JOSEPH COLLINS, M.D.

One by one the implacable enemies of man, the diseases which seek his destruction, are overcome by science. Diabetes, one of the most dreaded, is the latest to succumb. Its conquest is a feather in the cap of science, for, unlike many epoch-making discoveries, there was no element of chance, as Newton-watching-the-apple, no luck in it. It was conceived, gestated and delivered in the physiological laboratory of the University of Toronto, and its parents are Dr. F. G. Banting and Dr. C. H. Best, and its godfather Dr. J. J. R. McLeod.

Gradually medical science is gathering an arsenal of missiles which are specifics. That is, they are destructive of the causes of certain diseases. It has likewise come to full recognition of the fact that many diseases are due to excess or lack of certain substances manufactured within the system. When it was shown that the mysterious disease known as myoxedema was caused by absence of the thyroid secretion and that thyroid feeding cured it, therapeutics became a science. When it was recognised that disorders of metabolism—gout, obesity, diabetes and their various abortive manifestations—constituted, the bulk of chronic ailments and that these could be handled successfully by appropriate gland administration, therapeutics took on a tone of hopefulness which it had never had savo in the mouths of mystics and miracle workers.

The treatment of diabetes has been found in one of those mysterious secretions, a product of one of those glands that are replacing Freud in fiction and substituting the mother-in-law jokes of the daily press. It is therefore assumed that the general public knows something about them.

TINY CASKETS OF LIFE

To the man in the street and the casual reader "gland" has come to have a euphemistic connotation. It is used to hint at a matter that cannot be discussed openly without outraging delicacy the rejuvenation of man. But to the individual who knows something of physiology and to the physician the word has a deep significance, for they realise that the "glands" are the tiny caskets containing the secrets of life. The tinier the casket the deeper the secret. We have forced the ids of them all, and in proportion as we have been able to understand the mechanism and the product of each one of them, the mystery of life, of health, of disease has yielded. We are far from having a comprehensive understanding of them yet, even of the thyroid, the most familiar of them all, and there is much nonsense and pretense in the writings of many who seek to convey that they have special knowledge of the health restorative powers of extracts of these glands. But the story of the internal secretions (as the substance which the glands connected in their development and function with the sympathetic nervous system is called) is the story of progress year by year and decade by decade since the American, Brown-Sequard and the Frenchman, Claude Bernard, focussed upon them the attention of the medical world seventy-five years ago.

Today knowledge of the internal secretions, familiarity with the effects when the system is deprived of them, or over and under supplied with them, is more essential to the physician than a knowledge of the fundamental principles of pathology and bacteriology.

"It was this same Claude Bernand who taught us the essentials of what we know about the sugar in the blood and its source. It was from his time that the disease diabetes in which there is a loss of the normal capacity of the tissues to burn up sugar and therefore be supplied with the energy necessary to live happily and efficiently, in reality dates. Since hen physicians have been endeavoring to find a treatment for it, and now it would seem to have been found in insulin. This potent substance is the product of the pancreas, which is known in the meat market as the sweetbread of the abdomen, in contradistinction to the sweetbread of the neck, the thyroid gland. When this gland is examined with a magnifying glass it is seen that it is studded with countless little islands, like the Aegean Sea. A German named Langerhans discovered them and they have since been called by his name. He not only discovered them, but he suggested that these islands ecreted a substance quite different from the other parts of the pancreas. This supposition on the part of Langerhans was substantiated by many physiologists who the world over have been working to identify it and isolate it. They first found that the purpose or function of the secretion of these little islands was to effect a change in the starches taken into the digestive tract and then sent on into the blood in the shape of glucose to be oxidised and thus made to yield their energy for the purpose of the body. When glucose is not oxidised it becomes a poison to the system and the group of symptoms that produces are known as glycosuria and diabetes.

When this inability to take the starches successfully along the highroad which leads to the furnace where they are finally oxidised occurrs in children, the condition has heretofore been hopeless. In othqr words, infantile and juvenile diabetes has been a disease not subject to influence by medicine or treatment. Even "every day in every way" has failed them signally. When it occurs in adults its course can be modified by a most rigid diet and by adhering strictly to a hygienic mode of life, but heretofore the disease has not been considered recoverable. And now these doctors of Toronto have solved the problem upon which physiologists have been working for thirty years and more. They have shown how to keep unimpaired the chemical efficiency of that potent something produced by the cells of Langerhans islands so that it can be got into the blood untouched by the fermentive force of the products of the other cells, which constitute the main bulk of the pancreas and which provide the pancreatic juice thrown by means of a large duct into the alimentary canal for the fermentation of all foodstuffs in order that they may be changed into absorbate substances. And as island is insula in the language of science, this substance is called insulin.

A FASCINATING STORY

It would be a fascinating story that would relate how it was discovered, but it would be long, and it would be difficult to keep technical terms out of it. After von Mering and Minowsky have shown that removal of the pancreas was followed by diabetes, physiologists set to work to discover the internal secretion that was thus annihilated by such ablation and to isolate its hormone, as the active body of such secretion is called. The names that are associated with the discovery, Clarke, Banting, Best, Scott, et. al. are not known to fame, but they are indelibly written in the annals of medicine. The laboratory investigations of Clarke proved conclusively the existence of the pancreatic hormone, but it was impossible to detect its presence in extracts made from the pancreas because well-known ferments of the pancreatic juice, such as trypain and other enzymes dissolve it.

The problem therefore was to circumvent these enzymes. To D. F. G. Banting of Toronto is due the credit of suggesting that this might be accomplished by taking advantage of the well-known fact that the cells which secrete the digestive enzymes become completely degenerated in a few weeks after the pancreatic ducts are ligated, whereas those of the islands of Langerhans, which secrete the antidiabetic hormone, remain more or less intact. He undertook to see whether extracts of the degenerated gland might yield more definite results. Working in conjunction with Dr. C. H. Best he found that dogs whose pancreas had been removed and who were not subject to treatment rarely lived more than three or four weeks, whereas a dog that was treated with the extract after his pancreas had been removed lived ten weeks and was then chloroformed.

Thus it was found by experimentation that the pancreas does contain antidiabetic hormones. Banting and Best got satisfactory results from an active extract of the pancreas of a full-grown ox when alcohol was used as the extracting medium so as to circumvent the destructive action of trypsin. I?dWOmr

The Physiological Laboratory of the University of Toronto announced that it had contrived to keep isolated the product of the pancreatic islands and that it could be injected into the tissues without discomfort or injury. Then the angel of hope revealed itself to countless sufferers from diabetes and other forms of glycosuria throughout the world.

The Carnegie Foundation made an appropriation for the investigation and use of insulin at the Potter Metabolic Laboratory and clinic in Santa Barbara, founded by friends of Dr. Nathaniel Bowditch Potter, an eminent physician of this city, who fought valiantly against diabetes and finally succumbed to it a few years ago. The reports of the use of insulin in that laboratory have been fully corroborated by the physicians who discussed the subject at the convention in Atlantic City a few weeks ago.

In a paper on the subject, published in the same journal in the early days of the present year, Dr. D. F. G. Banting, Dr. W. R. Campbell and A. A. Fletcher reported over fifty cases of diabetes treated with insulin, all beneficially, some of them having been able to return to work after a month of treatment. The most marked benefit was in children and in young people. This is in harmony with the experience of every physician who has had experience in gland therapy. The younger the patient, the greater the chance of recovery.

Insulin has been in use by a few physicians to whom it was given by the University of Toronto, for the purpose of testing it, for the last nine months. At a meeting of the Association of American Physicians, the premier scientific society of this country, held last week in Atlantic City, several of them reported their results, notably Dr. E. F. Joslin of Boston, Dr. Frederick M. Allen and Dr. Nellis B. Foster of New York, Dr. A. McPhedran and Dr. F. G. Banting of Toronto and Dr. H. Rawle Geyelin, physicians whose names have been permanently associated with the progress of our knowledge of diabetes and its treatment. They were all in agreement that the use of insulin in diabetes was followed by astonishing and gratifying results. They were also in accord that its administration should be looked upon as a treatment, not a cure, and that its use did not absolve the patient from adhering to appropriate diet or the physician from imposing it. All were enthusiastic and optimistic.

Dr. Joslin, who has had a larger experience with insulin than any one in this country, warned against its improper use and urged physicians to learn the technique of its administration, and to become familiar with the proper diet of diabetic individuals to whom they propose to administer the remedy, before giving the first injection. He pointed out that this was not a difficult matter, but that the dose of insulin must be determined by the amount of sugar in the blood, the initial doses being always very small.

DIET STILL NECESSARY

Dr. Allen, while sharing the enthusiasm of the other clinicians whose experience entitles them to an opinion, warned that diet is still most necessary in diabetes, and that problems of diet still retain their importance.

Dr. H. Rawle Geyelin showed lantern slides of children with whom insulin had been used with results that might properly be called marvelous.

Dr. F. G. Banting, reporting his fuller experience, said that all forms of diabetes, save that associated with intestinal fermentation and its commonest manifestation, respond quickly and favorably to insulin. It permits individuals with diabetes to burn sufficient carbohydrate to which proteid and fats are added to permit them to live happily and sufficiently.

The result of their investigations raises the hope that diabetes may be about to go the way of syphilis and malaria; that a treatment has been discovered to combat it, and that the disease has been robbed of its terror. Now what remains to discover is its prevention, and meanwhile how properly to use the potent agent, insulin.

Whether nature will cure diabetes when the insulin gives the injured pancreas a rest remains to be seen. The likelihood is that it will do so in the young. The old may have to be satisfied with life that is supported by daily insulin injection.

Fortunately, the University of Toronto patented insulin and thus forstalled its unscrupulous use of predatory propaganda. Not only is its proper manufacture thus insured, but it is kept in the hands of those who have learned or are capable of learning to use it properly, efficiently, scientifically.

TAXATION AT KULING

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS.

Sir: May I have a little space in The China Press to write a short article in relation to the present method of taxation of Kuling property?

There seems to be no idea of taxing according to the present value of the property, but according to the value when the lots were bought, and the bungalows erected, perhaps ten, fifteen, twenty, or even twenty-five years ago. Therefore, some of the most valuable property in Kuling, and in central locations, and that which is bringing the highest rentals—is being taxed at a comparatively low rate, while the property that has been recently purchased is being charged, in proportion, an exorbitant sum. To cite two or three significant examples; a bungalow, valued at $4,500 and renting annually for 400 Tls. is charged $44 taxes, exactly the same sum as a bungalow worth $2,000, and renting for $250. A bungalow valued at $3,500 is also charged the same annual rate, $44. Another bungalow, recently purchased at $4,000, is taxed $46.

If this system of unequal taxation is general in Kuling, and a part of the residents are paying over double what the others are required to pay, should there not be a complete revision of the whole tax roll? In order that fairness may be shown, there should be an equal rate for all, and it should be according to the present value of the property, and not according to some past valuation now long out of date.

An Attic Salt-Shaker

BY W. ORTON TEWSON

Stephen Leacock, the Canadian Mark Twain, tells how he got lost en route to the Savage Club whither he was bound for one of the famous Saturday night house dinners during his recent stay in London. "Being lost in the puzzling little streets of the Adelphia (where the Savage is located), I asked a fellow wanderer the way. Oh, I am going to the Savage myself,' he replied. 'I'm going to sleep there tonight. A funny fellow from Canada is going to say a few words.' He then laughed a nasty cackle of a laugh."

Here is how Francis Carruthers Gould ("F. C. G." the famous cartoonist) scored off Bernard Shaw, when the latter had compared himself with Shakespeare. "I'll tell you what Shaw's comparison reminded me of," said Gould in his reply. "It reminded me of the flashing of an advertisement of Beecham's Pills upon the glorious old pile of Westminster Abbey." I am told that Shaw sat silent, with an uneasy smile on his face, while the audience laughed him out of existence. That incredible picture places the story in the category of those which ought to be, but are not, realties.

There must be some subtle connection between the ability of certain English writers, popular on this side, and the fact that their wives are, or rather were, Americans. To mention only one or two: Jeffry Farnol is the husband of a New York girl whom he married before he wrote his great success. E. Phillips Oppenheim married a Boston girl. Cosmo Hamilton married a girl from California and, well, I hate to talk about my own private affairs.

Edward W. Bok tells, in "A Man from Maine," these stories of Cyrus K. Curtis, the publisher:

"As a boy he (Mr. Curtis) sang in a church choir as tenor. One day he was selected to sing at a Sunday school convention in Tremont Temple (Boston) in a quartet of which the soprano was the girl, Lillian Norton, whom, in later years, the world knew as Nordica. This incident was always used by Mr. Curtis when some one would ask him: "Don't you even sing?" Oh, yes, indeed he would reply, 'I have sung with Nordica.'"

"One day he (Mr. Curtis) was riding on a very old elevator in a building which he owns when a passenger criticised it and said: 'Old an Curtis ought to fix this thing. There'll be a big accident here some day.' When the passengers got out Mr. Curtis got out too, and said: 'I am "old man Curtis." How about this elevator?" The man gasped with astonishment, but on being informed that Mr. Curtis was out for information gave him his views. The next day the elevator was 'closed for repairs.'"

Words of wisdom from "A Man from Maine:"

"The three really great things in the world are a mountain, the ocean and an earnest man at his work."

"The current coin in business and the only coin that is consistently current is character."

"A woman either makes or breaks a man, and if no relation in life is this so true as in that of husband and wife."

"If anything, I should say the chances for the young, man of today are far more numerous than they were forty years ago; certainly the opportunities are more varied and larger in scope."

"I am firm in the conviction that the successes made in the past or present will seem as naught compared with the successes to be made by our sons in the future."

Detective stories, said Auston Chamberlain, the British statesman, the other day, were the sole topic of discussion at a certain cabinet meeting during the war, when news of vital importance was being anxiously awaited. It does seem to be true that the pursuit of statesmanship helps men to appreciate this form of fiction at its true worth. Woodrow Wilson has been known to sit up all night to finish a detective story. Arthur Balfour (now Earl Balfour) has confessed to the same thing. Bismarck's favorite author was the creator of Le Coq.

But, if such be the reading of less mercrurial men, what lurid shockers must be the favorite study of Signor Mussolini!

Apropos of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's visit here reminds me of an awkward mistake made by the chairman at one of his meetings. That worthy, having been pressed into service at the last moment and knowing scarcely anything as to what it was all about, introduced Sir Arthur in these words: "I present to you Conan Doyle, the eminent English divine."

Not so far wrong after all.

Conan Doyle, who is looking mighty well these days, has done little or no literary work for seven years past. His whole time has been given up to the study of the psychic. It is perhaps not generally known that every cent he has earned during that period by his lectures, etc., has been handed over to a fund devoted to the cause he has made his own.

When at home the creator of Sherlock Holmes lives in a delightful old house in the old-fashioned village of Crowborough in Sussex. Lady Doyle, who is every whit as keen about spiritualism as her husband, has, I am told, developed into a first-class "medium." The Doyle children, too, share their parents' belief. My one hope is that the spirits will be kind to us mortals and inspire Sir Arthur to write another book like "The White Company."

Sir James M. Barrie used to tell this story: A certain theatrical "star" fell ill and his understudy was suddenly called upon to play the part. The understudy, scorning false modesty, dispatched telegrams to all the critics and others interested in the drama, informing them that he would be appearing that evening. In the afternoon Barrie was at club frequented by dramatic critics. "Did any of you receive a telegram from 'X' today?" he asked. They all had. "What did you do?" They had not answered it, of course. Had Barrie replied? "Yes," said Barrie. "What did you send?" "I wired: 'Thanks for the warning!"

Harry L. Foster, the "Tropical Tramp," when he was in Singapore recently getting material for his new book, "A Beachcomber in the Orient," was asked by several local beachcombers to write an appropriate little note to accompany a gift of a pair of silk stockings to a Miss Hiller, a missionary lady, who had befriended them. This is what Foster wrote:

With the highest admiration for
your nifty conformation
We are sending you this pair
of silken hose,
For we know of none, Miss Hiller,
who would make a better
filler.
Or a better decoration when
the wild wind blows.

And now in missionary circles he is called the "Topical Scamp."

There is probably no field of human activity in which the layman is so completely at the mercy of the dealer in the spurious as is the purchaser of antique furniture. In his "Old English Walnut and Lacquer Furniture" (McBride), Mr. R. W. Symonds has been at pains to expose the methods of the makers of false antiques in these two styles. Mr. Symonds' book is the work of a recognised expert which will be of value to the collector, the dealer and the interior decorator.

A Tooth For A Tooth

BY "BUGS" BAER

Some unemployed maniac has started another beauty tournament among our soprano broadcasters. It is an elimination contest subject to rules and wrinkles.

He offers first prize of one pair of arch supporters to girl with most beautiful feet Cinderella parked her hot dogs in cinders. Which must be reason why some ladies ordered so much coal last Winter

They had one contest for most prettiful nose. Another for laziest hands. Still another for beautiful teeth, either in or out. Subway held contest for girl with handsomest elbows. Chicago had one for shrill person with most ornamental ears. Put them all together, they spell mother. Nome which means whole world to me.

When grandpop fell in love with one of his wives, he fell in love all over. But these separate beauty contests change all that. Now, you get infatuated with your wife's nose or her big toe which won all beauty prizes in Kokomo.

When you exchange pictures she sends you panorama of her ears.

Then she sends you another of her perfect feet after sixteen visits to chiropodists. By time she sends you complete comic album of her features, you are dizzy and have to take all her photographs to puzzle factory to have them assembled.

It's pretty good idea at that. Girl with nice teeth might have palmetto leaf ears. Flapper with perfect beezer might be overcrowded with chins. Lady with exquisite crossed eyes might have gigantic thumbprints. By tossing out decoy pictures of her Grecian profile, any girl might make any man forget her full dish face.

Flashlight pictures of happy bridal mob will show bride's ears stuffed with orange blossoms. Fence lithographs of prominent actresses may omit their noses and feet as being too prominent.

Anybody can be beautiful now by consulting fragment photographers. Girl will mail you autographed map of her blue ribbon neck so she will be long in your memory.

This business of full face pictures was all wrong. This has been validated by recent odds and ends beauty contests.

If you want to be beautiful, pick out your best feature and have it photographed. If your ears are withering, your teeth are absconding and your hair is absent without leave, concentrate your beauty on your best chin. have it pictured and painted and some day you will be leading grand march in chin tableau.

Eye, ear and nose used to be name of special hospital, but now it means beauty.

That European Trip

BY J. J. MUNDY

For years, perhaps, you have longed to take a European trip.

You cannot spare the money and wonder how certain other men can.

Two men were discussing this subject recently.

One had just returned from a winter vacation trip, the other was lamenting his inability to take such a trip.

The man of the ocean voyage had worked ten hours a day for twenty years; the other had worked eight hours a day for the same length of time, both at approximately a dollar an hour.

Figuring the extra time, twelve hours a week for fifty-two weeks, and for twenty years, the man of the cruise had taken in $42,480 more money than the other.

But the eight hour a day man belonged to a club with dues amounting to $2 a week, and the $2 more a week amounted to $4,160 by the twenty years.

The ten hour a day man spent $5,000 on his trip but the other had spent only $840 less on his club.

Which was the most worth while; you can decide for yourself.

Sun Heats The Earth, Says Serviss

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

"It was always my belief that the earth's heat came from the sun wholly. However, now I have come to the realisation that such a thing is impossible. If it were so, all the days of a season would have approximately the same thermometer reading, since the sun, for the season, would be a certain distance away. But we know that during the Winter one day may be 5 below zero, and the next 10 above. I thus conclude that all of our heat does not come from the sun, and would like to know just from what source the earth's heat does come.—Young Medical Student, Chicago."

Your original idea was correct, and you make a mistake in abandoning it. Practically all the heat at the earth's surface is derived from the sun's radiation. That derived from the stars is infinitesimal.

It is true that the earth is warm within, but the best calculations indicate that, if the sun's radiation were withdrawn, the heat derived by conduction from the interior would not keep the earth's surface at a temperature of more than 40 degrees absolute, which means 233 degrees below the freezing point!

Evidently you also exaggerate the effect on temperature of the annual variations in the distance of the sun! These variations although amounting at the maximum to 3,000,000 miles, are so small in comparison with the mean distance of 93,000,000 miles that their effect is much less than that of the annual changes of inclination of the solar rays to the earth's surface. That is demonstrated by the simple fact that we in the northern hemisphere have our Summer when the earth is at its greatest distance from the sun, and our Winter when the distance is least.

The great and rapid changes of the daily temperature, frequently noticed during the same season are due to local causes. Thus, if in Chicago one Winter day shows a temperature of five degrees zero and the next day shows ten degrees above zero, the explanation can be found by consulting the Government weather maps, which will show that a warmer atmospheric area has taken the place of a colder one lying over Lake Michigan.

The heat in the atmosphere is not distributed uniformly, but very irregularly, like the heat in a bath tub when the water has been warmed from one end and then stirred about. Winds and air currents carry heated air and colder air in diverse directions over the earth's surface. In a general way, warm air flows from the equatorial regions poleward, and the colder air from the polar regions flows equatorward. But the circulation of the atmosphere is complicated and the business of the science of meteorology, on which the weather reports are based, is to discover the laws of that circulation and detect the effect of their working.

A certain average amount of radiation from the sun reaches the earth every day. This produces a certain total amount of heat in the atomsphere and on the surface of the earth, and the peculiarities in the distribution of that amount of daily heat explain the vagaries of the weather—temperature, cloudiness, rain, wind etc.

If you will take up a book on meterology, and study it a little you will probably find it unexpectedly interesting. There are things known about the laws and ways of storms that are highly exciting to the imagination. I am not a meteorologist, but there are some of these books that I would prefer to almost any novel for their "gripping" power alone.

Then you may not be aware of the great interest and intellectual pleasure that are to be found in watching the progress of storm and fair weather areas in their wonderful advance across almost the whole breadth of the United States. This can be done simply by inspecting the daily weather charts. There you will often see campaigns, as it were, conducted by the "powers of the air," campaigns fought out on thousand-mile fronts and affecting the comforts, and sometimes the lives, of the inhabitants of a million square miles of land. The long sweeping march of a West India hurricane, or a Texas-born cyclone, and the violent consequences when an obstinate "hyperbar" opposes the progress of a great wirlwind stormcenter, are dramatic things to look at, even on a map.

Sometimes, I think, we are too impatient toward the weather forecasters. We ought to consider the wild capriciousness of the atmospheric forces with which they have to deal. A little look into their science will do anybody good.

More Truth Than Poetry

BY S. E. KISER

I wonder if, sometimes, when she's
Reminded by some song or sign
Of other, fairer scenes than these,
Where oft her gaze was met by mine—
I wonder if when that occurs
She still recalls a night in May
When, with my two hands clasping hers,
I said things in an earnest way.
Perhaps, when lilacs are a-bloom
And beauty dazzles everywhere,
Some picture hanging in a room
Or some rebellious lock of hair
May start her memory wandering
Back over long forgotten trails
That end where we, one night in Spring,
Launched fairy fleets with misty sails.
She may recall when swallows dart
Close to the earth, as dusk arrives,
How once we whispered, heart to heart,
The solemn purpose of our lives,
Or when she hears the mellow chime,
At twilight, of some distant bell
Perhaps youth for a little time
Still holds her in its golden spell.
She may remember with regret,
Or happiness may fill her thought;
Things that I never shall forget
Perhaps she, long ago, forgot
Or, harking back to what she heard
Me whisper on a certain night,
She may considerit absurd,
And if she does I'll say she's right.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent, or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent, or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy and retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse. It causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria.

Physicians Recommend Castoria.

How The New York Times Viewed It—A Warning To China

(From The New York Times, May 9)

IT is the scale and audacity of the latest piece of Chinese banditry which make it serious. Never before have so many foreigners been kidnapped at one stroke in such a startling manner. Individuals have been seized, of course, and held for ransom; whole trains have been robbed in the approved Jesse James style; but this is the first time that a fast express has been stopped and foreigners forcibly removed from it. The bandits are not like our highwaymen. They are not merely a few desperate characters. They are unpaid soldiers, organised in bands, with a certain amount of military discipline, bent on obtaining loot with which to recompense themselves for the profitless months which they spent in the military forces of a Chinese Provincial Governor.

The outrage is, therefore, primarily an indication of the lack of political cohesion and order to which China has been reduced. Although the Peking Government is recognised by the world Powers, the actual control of the country is in the hands of the Tuchuns, or Military Governors of the various provinces. They recognise no allegiance to a central government. The hostility between the North and South is still strong, and President Li, who was reinstated by General Wu Pei-fu last Summer following the defeat of the Manchurian war lord Chang Tso-lin, and who presides over the Central Government in Peking, is virtually powerless. The revenues from the taxes, which are regularly paid and which should go to the Central Government, are, as a matter of fact, for the most part collected by the Provincial Governors and are used for their own affairs, while the Peking Government is unable to pay its bills.

This weakness of the Peking Government is one of the difficulties in the way of obtaining the release of the kidnapped foreigners. Its authority over the Province of Shantung is slight, and it has no large forces at its disposal. The fact however, that the Military Governor of Shantung has lost caste through this sensational piece of banditry within his territory will doubtless lead him to lend all his power to the chase. The trouble comes in making the bandits turn over their prisoners uninjured. To surround them, is easy enough. But if the bandits resort to extreme measures and expose their prisoners to death, a difficult situation may well arise.

To the credit of the Peking Government be it said that it is doing its utmost to obtain the release of the prisoners. The fact that British and Italian as well as American subjects are among the kidnapped has increased the likelihood of the incident assuming a grave international character for China. This President Li well knows. It is the supineness of China rather than the unwillingness of any Chinese Government to comply with the diplomats' demand which is liable to make future difficulties.

Diabetes, Dreaded Disease, Yields To New Gland Cure

BY JOSEPH COLLINS, M.D.

One by one the implacable enemies of man, the diseases which seek his destruction, are overcome by science. Diabetes, one of the most dreaded, is the latest to succumb. Its conquest is a feather in the cap of science, for, unlike many epoch-making discoveries, there was no element of chance, as Newton-watching-the-apple, no luck in it. It was conceived, gestated and delivered in the physiological laboratory of the University of Toronto, and its parents are Dr. F. G. Banting and Dr. C. H. Best, and its godfather Dr. J. J. R. McLeod.

Gradually medical science is gathering an arsenal of missiles which are specifics. That is, they are destructive of the causes of certain diseases. It has likewise come to full recognition of the fact that many diseases are due to excess or lack of certain substances manufactured within the system. When it was shown that the mysterious disease known as myxedema was caused by absence of the thyroid secretion and that thyroid feeding cured it, therapeutics became a science. When it was recognised that disorders of metabolism—gout, obesity, diabetes and their various abortive manifestations—constituted, the bulk of chronic ailments and that these could be handled successfully by appropriate gland administration, therapeutics took on a tone of hopefulness which it had never had save in the mouths of mystics and miracle workers.

The treatment of diabetes has been found in one of those mysterious secretions, a product of one of those glands that are replacing Freud in fiction and substituting the mother-in-law jokes of the daily press. It is therefore assumed that the general public knows something about them.

TINY CASKETS OF LIFE

To the man in the street and the casual reader "gland" has come to have a euphemistic connotation. It is used to hint at a matter that cannot be discussed openly without outraging delicacy to the rejuvenation of man. But to the individual who knows something of physiology and to the physician the word has a deep significance, for they realise that the "glands" are the tiny caskets containing the secrets of life. The tinier the casket the deeper the secret. We have forced the lids of them all, and in proportion as we have been able to understand the mechanism and the product of each one of them, the mystery of life, of health, of disease has yielded. We are far from having a comprehensive understanding of them yet, even of the thyroid, the most familiar of them all, and there is much nonsense and pretense in the writings of many who seek to convey that they have special knowledge of the health restorative powers of extracts of these glands. But the story of the internal secretions (as the substance which the glands connected in their development and function with the sympathetic nervous system is called) is the story of progress year by year and decade by decade since the American, Brown-Sequard and the Frenchman, Claude Bernard, focussed upon them the attention of the medical world seventy-five years ago.

Today knowledge of the internal secretions, familiarity with the effects when the system is deprived of them, or over and under supplied with them, is more essential to the physician than a knowledge of the fundamental principles of pathology and bacteriology.

"It was this same Claude Bernand who taught us the essentials of what we know about the sugar in the blood and its source. It was from his time that the disease diabetes in which there is a loss of the normal capacity of the tissues to burn up sugar and therefore be supplied with the energy necessary to live happily and efficiently, in reality dates. Since then physicians have been endeavoring to find a treatment for it, and now it would seem to have been found in insulin. This potent substance is the product of the pancreas, which is known in the meat market as the sweetbread of the abdomen, in contradistinction to the sweetbread of the neck, the thyroid gland. When this gland is examined with a magnifying glass it is seen that it is studded with countless little islands, like the Aegean Sea. A German named Langerhans discovered them and they have since been called by his name. He not only discovered them, but he suggested that these islands sereted a substance quite different from the other parts of the pancreas. This supposition on the part of Langerhans was substantiated by many physiologists who the world over have been working to identify it and isolate it. They first found that the purpose or function of the secretion of these little islands was to effect a change in the starches taken into the digestive tract and then sent on into the blood in the shape of glucose to be oxidised and thus made to yield their energy for the purpose of the body. When glucose is not oxidised it becomes a poison to the system and the group of symptoms that produces are known as glycosuria and diabetes.

When this inability to take the starches successfully along the highroad which leads to the furnace where they are finally oxidised occurrs in children, the condition has heretofore been hopeless. In other words, infantile and juvenile diabetes has been a disease not subject to influence by medicine or treatment. Even "every day in every way" has failed them signally. When it occurs in adults its course can be modified by a most rigid diet and by adhering strictly to a hygienic mode of life, but heretofore the disease has not been considered recoverable. And now these doctors of Toronto have solved the problem upon which physiologists have been working for thirty years and more. They have shown how to keep unimpaired the chemical efficiency of that potent something produced by the cells of Langerhans islands so that it can be got into the blood untouched by the fermentive force of the products of the other cells, which constitute the main bulk of the pancreas and which provide the pancreatic juice thrown by means of a large duct into the alimentary canal for the fermentation of all foodstuffs in order that they may be changed into absorbate substances. And as island is insula in the language of science, this substance is called insulin.

A FASCINATING STORY

It would be a fascinating story that would relate how it was discovered, but it would be long, and it would be difficult to keep technical terms out of it. After von Mering and Minowsky have shown that removal of the pancreas was followed by diabetes, physiologists set to work to discover the internal secretion that was thus annihilated by such ablation and to isolate its hormone, as the active body of such secretion is called. The names that are associated with the discovery, Clarke, Banting, Best, Scott, et. al. are not known to fame, but they are indelibly written in the annals of medicine. The laboratory investigations of Clarke proved conclusively the existence of the pancreatic hormone, but it was impossible to detect its presence in extracts made from the pancreas because well-known ferments of the pancreatic juice, such as trypain and other enzymes dissolve it.

The problem therefore was to circumvent these enzymes. To D. F. G. Banting of Toronto is due the credit of suggesting that this might be accomplished by taking advantage of the well-known fact that the cells which secrete the digestive enzymes become completely degenerated in a few weeks after the pancreatic ducts are ligated, whereas those of the islands of Langerhans, which secrete the antidiabetic hormone, remain more or less intact. He undertook to see whether extracts of the degenerated gland might yield more definite results. Working in conjunction with Dr. C. H. Best he found that dogs whose pancreas had been removed and who were not subject to treatment rarely lived more than three or four weeks, whereas a dog that was treated with the extract after his pancreas had been removed lived ten weeks and was then chloroformed.

Thus it was found by experimentation that the pancreas does contain antidiabetic hormones. Banting and Best got satisfactory results from an active extract of the pancreas of a full-grown ox when alcohol was used as the extracting medium so as to circumvent the destructive action of trypsin. I?dWOmr

The Physiological Laboratory of the University of Toronto announced that it had contrived to keep isolated the product of the pancreatic islands and that it could be injected into the tissues without discomfort or injury. Then the angel of hope revealed itself to countless sufferers from diabetes and other forms of glycosuria throughout the world.

The Carnegie Foundation made an appropriation for the investigation and use of insulin at the Potter Metabolic Laboratory and clinic in Santa Barbara, founded by friends of Dr. Nathaniel Bowditch Potter, an eminent physician of this city, who fought valiantly against diabetes and finally succumbed to it a few years ago. The reports of the use of insulin in that laboratory have been fully corroborated by the physicians who discussed the subject at the convention in Atlantic City a few weeks ago.

In a paper on the subject, published in the same journal in the early days of the present year, Dr. D. F. G. Banting, Dr. W. R. Campbell and A. A. Fletcher reported over fifty cases of diabetes treated with insulin, all beneficially, some of them having been able to return to work after a month of treatment. The most marked benefit was in children and in young people. This is in harmony with the experience of every physician who has had experience in gland therapy. The younger the patient, the greater the chance of recovery.

Insulin has been in use by a few physicians to whom it was given by the University of Toronto, for the purpose of testing it, for the last nine months. At a meeting of the Association of American Physicians, the premier scientific society of this country, held last week in Atlantic City, several of them reported their results, notably Dr. E. F. Joslin of Boston, Dr. Frederick M. Allen and Dr. Nellis B. Foster of New York, Dr. A. McPhedran and Dr. F. G. Banting of Toronto and Dr. H. Rawle Geyelin, physicians whose names have been permanently associated with the progress of our knowledge of diabetes and its treatment. They were all in agreement that the use of insulin in diabetes was followed by astonishing and gratifying results. They were also in accord that its administration should be looked upon as a treatment, not a cure, and that its use did not absolve the patient from adhering to appropriate diet or the physician from imposing it. All were enthusiastic and optimistic.

Dr. Joslin, who has had a larger experience with insulin than any one in this country, warned against its improper use and urged physicians to learn the technique of its administration, and to become familiar with the proper diet of diabetic individuals to whom they propose to administer the remedy, before giving the first injection. He pointed out that this was not a difficult matter, but that the dose of insulin must be determined by the amount of sugar in the blood, the initial doses being always very small.

DIET STILL NECESSARY

Dr. Allen, while sharing the enthusiasm of the other clinicians whose experience entitles them to an opinion, warned that diet is still most necessary in diabetes, and that problems of diet still retain their importance.

Dr. H. Rawle Geyelin showed lantern slides of children with whom insulin had been used with results that might properly be called marvelous.

Dr. F. G. Banting, reporting his fuller experience, said that all forms of diabetes, save that associated with intestinal fermentation and its commonest manifestation, respond quickly and favorably to insulin. It permits individuals with diabetes to burn sufficient carbohydrate to which proteid and fats are added to permit them to live happily and sufficiently.

The result of their investigations raises the hope that diabetes may be about to go the way of syphilis and malaria; that a treatment has been discovered to combat it, and that the disease has been robbed of its terror. Now what remains to discover is its prevention, and meanwhile how properly to use the potent agent, insulin.

Whether nature will cure diabetes when the insulin gives the injured pancreas a rest remains to be seen. The likelihood is that it will do so in the young. The old may have to be satisfied with life that is supported by daily insulin injection.

Fortunately, the University of Toronto patented insulin and thus forstalled its unscrupulous use of predatory propaganda. Not only is its proper manufacture thus insured, but it is kept in the hands of those who have learned or are capable of learning to use it properly, efficiently, scientifically.

TAXATION AT KULING

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS.

Sir: May I have a little space in The China Press to write a short article in relation to the present method of taxation of Kuling property?

There seems to be no idea of taxing according to the present value of the property, but according to the value when the lots were bought, and the bungalows erected, perhaps ten, fifteen, twenty, or even twenty-five years ago. Therefore, some of the most valuable property in Kuling, and in central locations, and that which is bringing the highest rentals—is being taxed at a comparatively low rate, while the property that has been recently purchased is being charged, in proportion, an exorbitant sum. To cite two or three significant examples; a bungalow, valued at $4,500 and renting annually for 400 Tls. is charged $44 taxes, exactly the same sum as a bungalow worth $2,000, and renting for $250. A bungalow valued at $3,500 is also charged the same annual rate, $44. Another bungalow, recently purchased at $4,000, is taxed $46.

If this system of unequal taxation is general in Kuling, and a part of the residents are paying over double what the others are required to pay, should there not be a complete revision of the whole tax roll? In order that fairness may be shown, there should be an equal rate for all, and it should be according to the present value of the property, and not according to some past valuation now long out of date.

Stephen Leacock, the Canadian Mark Twain, tells how he got lost en route to the Savage Club whither he was bound for one of the famous Saturday night house dinners during his recent stay in London. "Being lost in the puzzling little streets of the Adelphia (where the Savage is located), I asked a fellow wanderer the way. Oh, I am going to the Savage myself,' he replied. 'I'm going to sleep there tonight. A funny fellow from Canada is going to say a few words.' He then laughed a nasty cackle of a laugh."

Here is how Francis Carruthers Gould ("F. C. G." the famous cartoonist) scored off Bernard Shaw, when the latter had compared himself with Shakespeare. "I'll tell you what Shaw's comparison reminded me of," said Gould in his reply. "It reminded me of the flashing of an advertisement of Beecham's Pills upon the glorious old pile of Westminster Abbey." I am told that Shaw sat silent, with an uneasy smile on his face, while the audience laughed him out of existence. The technique of his administration, and to become familiar with the proper diet of diabetic individuals to whom they propose to administer the remedy, before giving the first injection. He pointed out that this was not a difficult matter, but that the dose of insulin must be determined by the amount of sugar in the blood, the initial doses being always very small.

There must be some subtle connection between the ability of certain English writers, popular on this side, and the fact that their wives are, or rather were, Americans. To mention only one or two: Jeffry Farnol is the husband of a New York girl whom he married before he wrote his great success. E. Phillips Oppenheim married a Boston girl. Cosmo Hamilton married a girl from California and, well, I hate to talk about my own private affairs.

Edward W. Bok tells, in "A Man from Maine," these stories of Cyrus K. Curtis, the publisher:

"As a boy he (Mr. Curtis) sang in a church choir as tenor. One day he was selected to sing at a Sunday school convention in Tremont Temple (Boston) in a quartet of which the soprano was the girl, Lillian Norton, whom, in later years, the world knew as Nordica. This incident was always used by Mr. Curtis when some one would ask him: "Don't you even sing?" Oh, yes, indeed he would reply, 'I have sung with Nordica.'"

"One day he (Mr. Curtis) was riding on a very old elevator in a building which he owns when a passenger criticised it and said: 'Old an Curtis ought to fix this thing. There'll be a big accident here some day.' When the passengers got out Mr. Curtis got out too, and said: 'I am "old man Curtis." How about this elevator?" The man gasped with astonishment, but on being informed that Mr. Curtis was out for information gave him his views. The next day the elevator was 'closed for repairs.'"

Words of wisdom from "A Man from Maine:"

"The three really great things in the world are a mountain, the ocean and an earnest man at his work."

"The current coin in business and the only coin that is consistently current is character."

"A woman either makes or breaks a man, and if no relation in life is this so true as in that of husband and wife."

"If anything, I should say the chances for the young, man of today are far more numerous than they were forty years ago; certainly the opportunities are more varied and larger in scope."

Detective stories, said Auston Chamberlain, the British statesman, the other day, were the sole topic of discussion at a certain cabinet meeting during the war, when news of vital importance was being anxiously awaited. It does seem to be true that the pursuit of statesmanship helps men to appreciate this form of fiction at its true worth. Woodrow Wilson has been known to sit up all night to finish a detective story. Arthur Balfour (now Earl Balfour) has confessed to the same thing. Bismarck's favorite author was the creator of Le Coq.

But, if such be the reading of less mercurial men, what lurid shockers must be the favorite study of Signor Mussolini!

Apropos of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's visit here reminds me of an awkward mistake made by the chairman at one of his meetings. That worthy, having been pressed into service at the last moment and knowing scarcely anything as to what it was all about, introduced Sir Arthur in these words: "I present to you Conan Doyle, the eminent English divine."

Not so far wrong after all.

Conan Doyle, who is looking mighty well these days, has done little or no literary work for seven years past. His whole time has been given up to the study of the psychic. It is perhaps not generally known that every cent he has earned during that period by his lectures, etc., has been handed over to a fund devoted to the cause he has made his own.

When at home the creator of Sherlock Holmes lives in a delightful old house in the old-fashioned village of Crowborough in Sussex. Lady Doyle, who is every whit as keen about spiritualism as her husband, has, I am told, developed into a first-class "medium." The Doyle children, too, share their parents' belief. My one hope is that the spirits will be kind to us mortals and inspire Sir Arthur to write another book like "The White Company."

Sir James M. Barrie used to tell this story: A certain theatrical "star" fell ill and his understudy was suddenly called upon to play the part. The understudy, scorning false modesty, dispatched telegrams to all the critics and others interested in the drama, informing them that he would be appearing that evening. In the afternoon Barrie was at club frequented by dramatic critics. "Did any of you receive a telegram from 'X' today?" he asked. They all had. "What did you do?" They had not answered it, of course. Had Barrie replied? "Yes," said Barrie. "What did you send?" "I wired: 'Thanks for the warning!'"

Harry L. Foster, the "Tropical Tramp," when he was in Singapore recently getting material for his new book, "A Beachcomber in the Orient," was asked by several local beachcombers to write an appropriate little note to accompany a gift of a pair of silk stockings to a Miss Hiller, a missionary lady, who had befriended them. This is what Foster wrote:

With the highest admiration for
your nifty conformation
We are sending you this pair
of silken hose,
For we know of none, Miss Hiller,
who would make a better
filler.
Or a better decoration when
the wild wind blows.
And now in missionary circles
he is called the "Topical Scamp."

There is probably no field of human activity in which the layman is so completely at the mercy of the dealer in the spurious as is the purchaser of antique furniture. In his "Old English Walnut and Lacquer Furniture" (McBride), Mr. R. W. Symonds has been at pains to expose the methods of the makers of false antiques in these two styles. Mr. Symonds' book is the work of a recognised expert which will be of value to the collector, the dealer and the interior decorator.

A Tooth For A Tooth

BY "BUGS" BAER

Some unemployed maniac has started another beauty tournament among our soprano broadcasters. It is an elimination contest subject to rules and wrinkles.

He offers first prize of one pair of arch supporters to girl with most beautiful feet Cinderella parked her hot dogs in cinders. Which must be reason why some ladies ordered so much coal last Winter

They had one contest for most prettiful nose. Another for laziest hands. Still another for beautiful teeth, either in or out. Subway held contest for girl with handsomest elbows. Chicago had one for shrill person with most ornamental ears. Put them all together, they spell mother. Nome which means whole world to me.

When grandpop fell in love with one of his wives, he fell in love all over. But these separate beauty contests change all that. Now, you get infatuated with your wife's nose or her big toe which won all beauty prizes in Kokomo.

When you exchange pictures she sends you panorama of her ears.

Then she sends you another of her perfect feet after sixteen visits to chiropodists. By time she sends you complete comic album of her features, you are dizzy and have to take all her photographs to puzzle factory to have them assembled.

It's pretty good idea at that. Girl with nice teeth might have palmetto leaf ears. Flapper with perfect beezer might be overcrowft ded with chins. Lady with exquisite crossed eyes might have gigantic thumbprints. By tossing out decoy pictures of her Grecian profile, any girl might make any man forget her full dish face.

Flashlight pictures of happy bridal mob will show bride's ears stuffed with orange blossoms. Fence lithographs of prominent actresses may omit their noses and feet as being too prominent.

Anybody can be beautiful now by consulting fragment photographers. Girl will mail you autographed map of her blue ribbon neck so she will be long in your memory.

This business of full face pictures was all wrong. This has been validated by recent odds and ends beauty contests.

If you want to be beautiful, pick out your best feature and have it photographed. If your ears are withering, your teeth are absconding and your hair is absent without leave, concentrate your beauty on your best chin. have it pictured and painted and some day you will be leading grand march in chin tableau.

Sun Heats The Earth, Says Serviss

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

"It was always my blief that the earth's heat came from the sun wholly. However, now I have come to the realisation that such a thing is impossible. If it were so, all the days of a season would have approximately the same thermometer reading, since the sun, for the season, would be a certain distance away. But we know that during the Winter one day may be 5 below zero, and the next 10 above. I thus conclude that all of our heat does not come from the sun, and would like to know just from what source the earth's heat does come.—Young Medical Student, Chicago."

Your original idea was correct, and you make a mistake in abandoning it. Practically all the heat at the earth's surface is derived from the sun's radiation. That derived from the stars is infinitesimal.

It is true that the earth is warm within, but the best calculations indicate that, if the sun's radiation were withdrawn, the heat derived by conduction from the interior would not keep the earth's surface at a temperature of more than 40 degrees absolute, which means 233 degrees below the freezing point!

Evidently you also exaggerate the effect on temperature of the annual variations in the distance of the sun! These variations although amounting at the maximum to 3,000,000 miles, are so small in comparison with the mean distance of 93,000,000 miles that their effect is much less than that of the annual changes of inclination of the solar rays to the earth's surface. That is demonstrated by the simple fact that we in the northern hemisphere have our Summer when the earth is at its greatest distance from the sun, and our Winter when the distance is least.

The great and rapid changes of the daily temperature, frequently noticed during the same season are due to local causes. Thus, if in Chicago one Winter day shows a temperature of five degrees zero and the next day shows ten degrees above zero, the explanation can be found by consulting the Government weather maps, which will show that a warmer atmospheric area has taken the place of a colder one lying over Lake Michigan.

The heat in the atmosphere is not distributed uniformly, but very irregularly, like the heat in a bath tub when the water has been warmed from one end and then stirred about. Winds and air currents carry heated air and colder air in diverse directions over the earth's surface. In a general way, warm air flows from the equatorial regions poleward, and the colder air from the polar regions flows equatorward. But the circulation of the atmosphere is complicated and the business of the science of meteorology, on which the weather reports are based, is to discover the laws of that circulation and detect the effect of their working.

A certain average amount of radiation from the sun reaches the earth every day. This produces a certain total amount of heat in the atomsphere and on the surface of the earth, and the peculiarities in the distribution of that amount of daily heat explain the vagaries of the weather—temperature, cloudiness, rain, wind etc.

If you will take up a book on meterology, and study it a little you will probably find it unexpectedly interesting. There are things known about the laws and ways of storms that are highly exciting to the imagination. I am not a meteorologist, but there are some of these books that I would prefer to almost any novel for their "gripping" power alone.

Then you may not be aware of the great interest and intellectual pleasure that are to be found in watching the progress of storm and fair weather areas in their wonderful advance across almost the whole breadth of the United States. This can be done simply by inspecting the daily weather charts. There you will often see campaigns, as it were, conducted by the "powers of the air," campaigns fought out on thousand-mile fronts and affecting the comforts, and sometimes the lives, of the inhabitants of a million square miles of land. The long sweeping march of a West India hurricane, or a Texas-born cyclone, and the violent consequences when an obstinate "hyperbar" opposes the progress of a great whirlwind stormcenter, are dramatic things to look at, even on a map.

Sometimes, I think, we are too impatient toward the weather forecasters. We ought to consider the wild capriciousness of the atmospheric forces with which they have to deal. A little look into their science will do anybody good.

More Truth Than Poetry

BY S. E. KISER

I wonder if, sometimes, when she's
Reminded by some song or sign
Of other, fairer scenes than these,
Where oft her gaze was met by mine—
I wonder if when that occurs
She still recalls a night in May
When, with my two hands clasping hers,
I said things in an earnest way.
Perhaps, when lilacs are a-bloom
And beauty dazzles everywhere,
Some picture hanging in a room
Or some rebellious lock of hair
May start her memory wandering
Back over long forgotten trails
That end where we, one night in Spring,
Launched fairy fleets with misty sails.
She may recall when swallows dart
Close to the earth, as dusk arrives,
How once we whispered, heart to heart,
The solemn purpose of our lives,
Or when she hears the mellow chime,
At twilight, of some distant bell
Perhaps youth for a little time
Still holds her in its golden spell.
She may remember with regret,
Or happiness may fill her thought;
Things that I never shall forget
Perhaps she, long ago, forgot
Or, harking back to what she heard
Me whisper on a certain night,
She may considerit absurd,
And if she does I'll say she's right.

That European Trip

BY J. J. MUNDY

For years, perhaps, you have longed to take a European trip.

You cannot spare the money and wonder how certain other men can.

Two men were discussing this subject recently.

One had just returned from a winter vacation trip, the other was lamenting his inability to take such a trip.

The man of the ocean voyage had worked ten hours a day for twenty years; the other had worked eight hours a day for the same length of time, both at approximately a dollar an hour.

Figuring the extra time, twelve hours a week for fifty-two weeks, and for twenty years, the man of the cruise had taken in $12,480 more money than the other.

But the eight hour a day man belonged to a club with dues amounting to $2 a week, and the $2 more a week amounted to $4,160 by the twenty years.

The ten hour a day man spent $5,000 on his trip but the other had spent only $840 less on his club.

Which was the most worth while; you can decide for yourself.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent, or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent, or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy and retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse. It causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria

THIS is the first picture of the King of Siam and his bride, who is a member of the royal dancing ballet. The romance of the King and the dancer entranced those who followed it, and the wedding was the occasion for much celebration among the Siamese, who thoroughly approved it.

INVITATION OF FUKIEN CHIEF ACCEPTED BY LU

Chekiang Tupan Will Send Son To Foochow To Discuss Situation

General Lu Yung-hsiang, director of Rehabilitation of Chekiang, has accepted the invitation of General Sun Chuan-fang, Tuli of Fukien, to send his son, Major-General Lu Yao-tung, to Foochow to conclude some definite negotiations with the Fukien potentate.

On account of the complicated military situation in Fukien, General Sun felt the difficulty of rehabilitation keenly and had sent emissary after emissary to Hangchow to call on General Lu for his views on the situation, because the latter is closely connected with the other Fukien executives. The exchange of views was considered by both as favorable, so General Sun had extended an invitation to General Lu's son to go down to the provincial capital and settle once for all some of the vexing problems outstanding.

It is understood that the Chekiang Tupan has accepted the invitation and instructed his son to depart for the South at an early

Air-Yachts With Motors

BY HARRY HARPER

The art of gliding, or motorless soaring, which received such a practical stimulus in the competitions last October, is entering an other and most fascinating phase, and one, too, which has almost illimitable prospects in the cheapening and popularising of aerial navigation.

To appreciate easily this development, one might picture the little motorless "sail-plane"—developed so remarkably since the war—as a yacht moving in the ocean of the air.

The business of the air-yachts man, as of the sailor of the sea is to seek out and profit by favoring winds. What the engineless air-sailor is after, putting it in the simplest way, is a wind-movement which will do for him what his motor would do if he had one: support him, that is to say, the air, and—by the upward tendency it may gain by blowing across rising ground—give his wings that "lift" which will enable him not merely to remain up in the air but also to carry out all sorts of exhilarating manoeuvres.

But, despite his skill, the element in which he sails, unseen and intangible, may suddenly fail the pilot who has no motive-power. He may pass out of favoring up-trends which act as his "engine," and though he steers questing, here and there—losing altitude as he does so under the inexorable pull of gravity—he may have reached earth before the wind will give him another lift upward.

Here it is that one sees the purpose and the value of the new stage we are entering upon.

SMALL ENGINE

The air-yacht, like many sea yachts, is to be fitted with a small auxiliary engine. Thus should the wind fail the air-sailor, as it often does his brother of the sea, he simply does the same as the skipper of a yacht would do: he sets going his little motor and, thanks to its aid, keeps up in the air, moving forward, till he finds himself again in some steady, dependable up-trend of wind. Whereupon he can dispense with his engine and let Nature, in the shape of the wind, do his sustaining for him without any cost or expenditure of fuel.

This auxiliary air-yachting should open up for us a sport and a cheap, delightful way of journeying, to which, looking ahead, one can hardly set limits.

We may, as some declare, be on the eve of an "air-sailing" boom which will have its influence on the outdoor amusements and pleasure trips of practically all of us.

We have, for example, M. Barbot, that dexterous Frenchman whose own soarings entitle him to respect, affirming enthusiastically that ere long we may be able to buy little flying yachts for less than £100, but experts more conservative tell us that we may have to pay, say, £150, or perhaps £200.

Plan Community Church To Supply Modern Need

(Contributed)

If anything good and benificent came out of the horror that raged between 1914 and 1918, it was the greater stress that people began to realise should be given to the word "Community." Under the stress of desperate emergencies people the world over came to the conclusion that whenever a thing was to be done and done right, the whole Community was by far the best agent for the task at hand. This feeling rose in a great wave that swept over all nations, regardless of creeds or dogmas. Nations found that shoulder to shoulder labor was far more productive than individual toil. Everything came to be done in a community way, there were communities of Nations and states, communities of cities and towns, all working, fighting, and singing together.

And from all over the world bearers of this knowledge of community power have come to Shanghai. Out here in the Far East a sturdy young community plant has sprung up on China's soil. Here we find representat'ves of many nationalites joining their strength of mind, muscle, and money to the building of a Community Church.

What a fortunate name for a Church! What a wealth of meaning lies in those two words! And how wisely are these workers, no longer contentious about nationalities or petty bickerrings, planning for their community center! Once, notso very long ago, a Church was a place that reverberated once weekly of voices. Then followed busy days in which the stained glass windows threw soft colors into an interior as lifeless as a tomb, days in which church members hurried past regardless of the spires and deserted chancel.

This was the kind of church many people recall unfavorably. This was the church of yesterday.

But the world moves on and we learn constantly. We have learned that the old style of church is an anachronism in our present life.

It is a windmill competing with petrol and electricity, working very inefficiently when all things are propitious, lying idle and helpless when the breezes die or when the gales rage.

So the Community Church is being built, as it were, to supply a modern need. Its function in the community will be as steady and quiet, as highly efficient and necessary as a great dynamo.

The doors of the new Community Church will be open to its community seven days of each week. When the campaign for 65,000 taels, with which to buy land and erect the first unit of its permanent equipment, closes on June 14, work will be begun on that first unit. That unit is not to be the final home of the church. This building will be the only center in Shanghai It is difficult to think of any use to which a building may be put that this splendid structure cannot fulfill. The main hall is designed to seat 600 people. Here the people of the Western District will see moving pictures, hear lectures, listen to good music. Then, when the chairs are cleared away, the youth of Shanghai will usurp the floor for basketball games. The referee's whistle will sound sharply in the same hall that fervent prayers are offered in the next day. Picture the result of blowing a sharp whistle in some of the churches we knew of old! "Sacrilege" would be a totally weak name to apply to such an act.

The Sunday School, that most essential part of every Church, will find spacious, high ceilinged rooms in which to hold their meetings. Each department will have its own territory it can work without interruption or disturbance.

A modern kitchen adjoined by a large storeroom will be always ready to prepare banquets and parties just as thousands of community kitchens prepared good food during the war. (How well I remember sandwiches and hot coffee that I had at just such places!)

The church offices are to be incorporated in this building. This important feature will enable the pastor to keep regular office hours at a place where everyone knows just where to find him. In the seclusion of a real suite of office rooms much greater efficiency in the detail work of the organisation can be attained than is possible under the present disrupted condition of affairs.

And lastly, there is to be an especially beautiful ladies rest room, fitted with every comfort that its occupants can wish for.

This is the splendid first unit that the Community Church is desirous of building at once. This is to be the great Community Center of the entire city of Shanghai. This is the extremely practical essentially neccessary building that a large portion of the 65,000 taels will go to provide for.

In closing, just one little story.

There was once an old Roman senator who realised that Carthage was the greatest menace to Rome's greatness. So he concluded every speech with the words "Carthage must be destroyed!" It mattered not on what he had spoken, those were his closing words. His understanding of psychology was good his determination gradually spread to his colleagues and Carthage was destroyed.

The spirit of the Community Church is as that of the old Roman. The twentieth century motto of these Shanghailanders is, however, not one of destruction but of helpful construction They say, "Shanghai must have its Community Church". History repeats itself.

Your New Pleasure Boat

At this time of year a great number of craft change hands, varying from the humble dinghy or little half-rater up to lordly pleasure yachts costing many thousands of pounds.

The type at present most in demand is the small cruiser which the owner sails either single-handed or with the help of a friend, or of one paid hand. She is from five to eight tons measurement, she usually has an auxiliary engine, and, well handied, will go anywhere and do any thing.

The man who buys a second-hand motor-car and is not himself an expert mechanic can always obtain the services of an expert for a moderate fee. But the man who wishes to purchase a second-hand yacht does not find matters so easy.

It is true that he can employ a Lloyd's surveyor, but Lloyd's surveyors work by certain rules, which necessitate cutting out lengths of planking and removing fastenings.

In addition to the surveyor's fees, the vessel to be examined must be hauled out on a slip, and this, with the cutting away, the making good and the relaunching, will prove a very expensive business for the purchaser.

The best way for the amateur to choose a boat is to search about on his own account until he finds something likely, then to get an expert friend or a practical yacht builder to help him to examine the boat. It is not necessary to get her up on a slip, but simply to have her on the hard for a tide.

The first point to ascertain is of what material she is built. English oak or Rangoon teak can be trusted; but English elm, fir, or Oregon are doubtful materials.

The next thing is to go over her with a sharp-pointed penknife and a light hammer. The penknife will find the soft places under the paint, if there are any, and the hammer the rotten ones. Rotten wood tapped with a hammer gives out a dull sound which, to the trained ear, is unmistakable.

If the outer planking is sound the next thing is to go below and search for any sign of leakage, either through the decks or the rudder trune. Carefully examine the sailroom or sail locker, and hunt everywhere fore and aft for soft places.

After this the ironwork must be examined, and then the spars and blocks. Sails should be opened out in order to see if they have been attacked by mildew. Running gear does not matter so much, since it is not an expensive matter to renew it. The main thing, after all, is to ascertain whether or not the hull is roughly sound.

If the boat is unregistered you can buy it as easily as a pound of tea. You simply pay your money and take a receipt. The transfer of a registered boat is a more complicated matter, for the transaction has to be registered at the Custom House of the vessel's port of registry.
